MEDFORD POLICEMAN SLAIN

Smith 363, Hoover 122 in American Straw Ballot

Today

A Candidate for Cities.
A Western Victory.
A Hindu Built It.
Jim Reed Can't Quit.

— By Arthur Brisbane —

Copyright, 1928, Star Co.

THE MANCHESTER GUARDIAN sees in Governor Smith's nomination recognition of the power in great cities. It believes that national control is passing into the hands of "great city populations made up of more recent immigrant communities, which never yet have had a champion of their own in the presidential conflict."

Senator Capper of Kansas rejoices in the Hoover-Curtis nomination as "proof that the Republican East has capitulated to the Republican West."

Capper thinks the country will be safe in the hands of "two farm bred western men, one a genius at constructive administration, the other a masterful political leader."

Most important to Republicans is the fact that Capper believes the Republican platform and candidates are entirely acceptable to farmers. Senator Capper understands farmers as well as any man in the country.

Assan Dina, good Hindu, is dead. May he live forever, in the heaven of his choice, or in that queerly negative Nirvana, if preferred. He rebuilt an astronomical observatory on Mount Blanc, dropping materials from airplanes, and has spent $5,000,000 on what will be the finest observatory in the world, on Mount Saleve.

When completed this observatory, a gift to France, will cost $6,250,000, and have the world's greatest telescope, its diameter 105 inches, five inches wider than our Mount Wilson telescope.

In the clear mountain air, 4427 feet high, this gigantic eye, looking into space, will be, scientifically, the finest monument on this earth.

Senator Jim Reed, who says he leaves the Senate next ... to practise law, should ... his mind. Others can practise law as well as he. Few can put important truths with emphasis such as his.

Have you read what Reed said, denouncing the League of Nations, in 1919?

"I decline to set up any government greater than that established by the fathers, greater than that baptized in the blood of patriots from the lanes of Lexington to the forests of the Argonne, greater than that sanctified by the tears of all the mothers whose heroic sons have gone down to death to sustain its glory and its independence. I decline to set up any government greater than the government of the United States of America."

Thanks largely to Reed's good fighting, the Wishy-washies did not succeed in dragging this country into a European supergovernment. Such a man ought to be in public life, fighting to his last day.

King George, Queen Mary and 100,000 other Britons saw on Saturday an exhibition of new war planes.

Fighting pursuit planes, brand new, showed speed up to 200 miles and swift day bombers showed how easily a city or a ship could be destroyed.

Two hundred airplanes were exhibited. Britannia means to rule the air waves also, and probably will.

BODY RECOVERED IN SEA, SAYS OSLO

London, July 2 (AP)—In a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company reporting that according to messages received from Oslo the body of Capt. Roald Amundsen has been found in the sea off Norway.

The report lacks official confirmation.

Roald Amundsen, discoverer of the South Pole and noted Arctic explorer, left Norway on June 18 with Lief Dietrichsen, another noted Norwegian explorer, and a French crew in a French seaplane to search for Gen. Umberto Nobile, then stranded with five companions off North East land.

Nobile has since been rescued by Lieut. Lindborg, Swedish flier, and is now aboard the base ship Citta di Milano, off northern Spitzbergen.

Amundsen's decision to help in the search for Nobile was all the more dramatic as he and the Italian dirigible expert had been at odds ever since their famous dirigible flight in the Norge over the North Pole.

The pilot of the French seaplane was Commander Rene Guilbaud, and the three other members of the crew were Lieut. Albert de Cuverville, Emile Valette, radio operator, and Gilbert Brazy, mechanic.

Injuries Halt Nobile's Plans to Rescue Crew

Rome, July 2 (AP)—It Tevere said today that Gen. Umberto Nobile intended to fly to the rescue of his comrades marooned on the ice north

STORE BURGLARS KILL OFFICER

While attempting to arrest two store robbers today, Patrolman Francis J. Gilleland of the Medford police department was shot dead by one or more of their confederates at Boston ave. and North st., Medford Hillside.

The thugs escaped, leaving Gilleland face down on the sidewalk, his hand still tightly clutching his revolver, which he had been given no chance to fire.

A reward of $500 for information leading to their arrest and conviction was offered by Mayor Edward H. Larkin of Medford.

Police have a description of four youths who are believed to be the murder gang, and a description of their automobile, and these have been flashed to every city and town in New England.

Two youths were arrested at Nashua, N. H., several hours after the killing. They were riding on a truck from Lowell to Nashua and aroused the suspicions of the driver who called the police.

Two others wer seen to flee from another truck on the Lowell-Nashua road, in Lowell, when they caught sight of a State policeman. Twelve Lowell policemen are scouring the woods for these two.

Bit Stock Used to Force Store Door First Murder Clue

A heavy bit stock, which may contain finger-prints, was the first clue found by police investigating the murder of Patrolman Gilleland of the Medford force. It had been used to force open the drugstore door and was discarded in flight.

Search is on for four youths, all between 21 and 30 years, and an old Black Hudson touring car with red wheels. The back part of the top of this car is torn.

One of the four youths has red hair and is of medium height and build. He wore a soft collar. This partial description has been flashed to every town in New England.

SMITH LEADING HOOVER IN BIG HUB STRAW VOTE

An overwhelming demand for ballots, with a heavy voting trend toward Al Smith, featured the inauguration of the Boston Evening American's straw vote campaign today.

Three voting booths, in charge of girls, put up in strategic places as the forerunner of numerous others, were literally swamped with votes ran short of ballots in two hours.

Returns from Precinct 1, located at Park st., on the Common Mall, and Precinct 2, at the entrance to the South Station, showed 493 ballots cast in the first two hours, with 363 registering their preferences for Smith and 122 for Herbert Hoover. Eight ballots were thrown out.

Of the total votes cast, 69 indicated they had switched from the Republican column last presidential election to the Democratic this year,

EAST WIND COOLS HUB

A threatening heat wave, which has caused the death of 23 persons directly and indirectly in New York and Chicago, was averted in Boston today when an east wind sprang up at 11 o'clock, sending the mercury tumbling.

The early morning temperatures were about the same as those of yesterday, but at 7 o'clock the official mercury leaped from 67 to 74, with indications that it would continue to soar.

In fact hours it climbed five more degrees, only to be sent back from 79 to 76 when the wind shifted. Forecast for Boston and vicinity: Fair tonight and Tuesday, not much change in temperature; light north to west winds.

Ballot boxes in the Boston Evening American's straw contest in the presidential race are at North and South stations and on the Common. POLICEMAN SHOT DEAD BY 4 THUGS AT MEDFORD

Gilleland was 32 years old and a World War veteran. He leaves a wife, Mrs. Mildred Letson Gilleland, and two children, Mildred Louise, nine, and Doris Marion, five. He was considered one of the bravest men on the force.

State police and the Medford authorities, reconstructing the crime, are positive that Gilleland surprised two of the gang in an attempt to smash in the rear door of Peckham's drug store at Boston ave. and North st.

The middle panels of this door, above the lock, had been splintered and this noise probably attracted the policeman's attention.

He was marching the two out of an alleyway between the block of stores and a three-story dwelling, his gun in his hand, when he was ambushed at the junction of the alley and Boston ave.

Four shots were fired, and Gilleland fell in his tracks, one bullet having passed through his right chest and sidewise to the heart, which it penetrated.

A second bullet, apparently the last to be fired, as he lay prostrate, went into the neck at the back and slightly on the right side.

The other bullets went astray. Residents of the neighborhood, including John Leonard, 12, of 259 Boston ave., heard the whole four and hastily telephoned Medford police headquarters.

Police Chief John E. Welch was called from his bed and the entire staff of lieutenants and sergeants were rounded up to rush to the murder scene with him. State Police Detectives Sherwick and O'Neill were also called upon.

RANG LAST BOX.

A heavy bit stock was found in the rear of the drug-store. In the hope that it may contain fingerprints it was carefully wrapped for examination by experts.

An escaped prisoner, said to be a gang member, is under suspicion. Police say he tried a break in the same block of stores in Medford and was caught and sentenced, going to Concord Reformatory and escaping later from Charles street jail.

Gilleland went on duty at 1 o'clock this morning. At 2:40 a. m. he rang in his last box from Harold and Hamilton sts.

Just before 3 o'clock he met and talked with Charles Taintor, a milkman living on Tufts st., Medford, and asked Taintor if he had seen a touring car with a crowd in it. Taintor had not seen such a car.

Three o'clock struck as he was talking with the milkman and they parted. Gilleland walking away toward Boston ave. and North st., where he was to meet his death about 20 minutes later.

He told Taintor, in leaving, that he was "looking up the bunch in the touring car."

Soon afterward a black Hudson touring car with red wheels and a torn rear curtain, stopped at W. H. Wheeler's garage, Salem st., Medford, for water and oil.

The garageman noted the car and its occupants. He described the driver as about 40 years old, dark and with a small mustache. In the front seat beside the driver was a youth of 21 or 22, with light or reddish hair. Two swarthy youths were in the rear seat.

The automobile was described as an old model, probably 1921, 1922 or 1923. It was apparently in poor shape and was overheated when the youths drove into the garage.

This is believed to be the gang of killers and their "getaway car." It is believed Gilleland had seen it in the Hillside district earlier in the morning, and his suspicions were aroused.

HEAD FOR MALDEN

The stop at the garage was apparently made after the shooting, and the four were on their way toward Malden and Newburyport turnpike, in the opinion of the police.

There is a slight discrepancy in the time, those who heard the shooting giving that time as about 3:30, while the garageman says the car was there about 3:15, but investigators believe that the difference is so slight that the construction of events will prove correct.

When police reached the scene they found Gilleland face down on the sidewalk in a small pool of blood. There was no blood at any other spot, indicating that he fell right where the first bullet hit him.

Harry McGilvary of Beacon st., Winthrop, and Arthur C. Gilmour of Appleton st., Somerville, milk truck drivers, found the policeman's body while police were on their way.

Examination of the body by Chief Welch, Lieutenants Ewell and Connor and Sergeants Buffum, Ward, Golding and McLaughlin showed that both shots had been fired at close range.

"Patrolman Gilleland was one of the best men in the department, conscientious and vigilant at all times and a man who never shirked his duty," said Chief Welch. "He was also a good father and had a splendid character."

Residents, aroused by the shooting, heard one man running down the alley toward the Boston & Maine railroad tracks and another along the granolithic sidewalk on Boston ave.

The four men probably scattered to take different directions to the place where their car was waiting.

McGilvary and Gilmour, the two milkmen, reported seeing a long black touring car on Boston ave., a short distance from North st., prior to the shooting.

They said three men stood on the sidewalk talking to the driver, who was alone in the car.

Another clue came from the motorman of an Arlington Center-Sullivan sq. car which picked up a passenger at Boston ave. and Winthrop st., about 300 yards from the scene of the shooting, at 3:25 a. m.

Motorman Clue

This passenger was flushed and puffing, and his appearance caused the motorman to turn twice to look at him. He left the car at Powder House sq., a one-minute ride from where he boarded it. He is about 24, five feet ten inches tall and wore a light suit and cap, and he carried a black bag. The motorman's name was withheld by police.

In addition to the escaped prisoner, another member of the same gang is being sought. This gang was broken up a few years ago by the arrest of its leader. All the members were reckless and daring and engaged in every variety of crime.

Lowell police are combing a wooded district bordered by Princeton boulevard, Baldwin, Stedman and Webber sts. for the two youths who were seen to jump from the rear end of a truck on the boulevard a few hours after the Medford shooting.

TWO MEN HELD

They fled when they saw State Officer John P. Regan of the Concord barracks, who was patrolling in a small automobile. Regan gave chase, but lost the trail. Sergts. Sharkey and Sullivan of the Lowell police led a detail of ten men in an intensive search.

It was right on top of this report by Regan that Lowell authorities received a telephone call from Charles Mello of Royalston st., Lowell, a truck driver, who was on his way to Nashua, N. H.

Mello said he had two men on his truck of whom he was suspicious, having heard of the murder and overheard some of their conversation. He said he had left the truck on the pretense of getting some cigarettes and was telephoning in a small store on the Lowell-Nashua road.

He was told by the police to keep on as if he suspected nothing. Lowell police then notified Nashua authorities and two motorcycle officers met the truck, placing the two youths under arrest. They gave their names readily with addresses in Lawrence. Mello had picked them up north of Lowell. They were held for further questioning.

REDDISH HAIR

Two Massachusetts State troopers went to Nashua to interview these men and after hearing their story of their whereabouts during the night, left to make a thorough checkup.

The 32-caliber bullets were taken from the slain policeman's body and handed over to Capt. Charles van Amburgh, State firearms expert, who took them to Medford police headquarters for examination and tests.

The bullets were recovered during an autopsy made by Dr. Thomas C. Durell of Cambridge, medical examiner, assisted by Dr. David C. Dow of Cambridge, at Gaffey's undertaking rooms, High st., Medford. Death was officially reported as due to hemorrhage following gunshot wounds and homicidal.

The Medford garage man who reported the old touring car and its occupants to the police is Jack Nash of Alfred st., Woburn. Another employe, Alfred Francis, who was also on duty during the night, told an identical story.

CRIMINAL LOOK

"It came from the direction of the square, which would also be from the Hillside direction, and in leaving went toward Malden or the Fellsway," said Nash.

"It was a black touring car, an old Hudson, of the 1921, '22 or '23 model, they were all the same style. The radiator was steaming.

"One fellow got out and said, 'Give us a quart of oil.' In pouring in the oil, I noticed that it had no spare tire. That model carried the spare on the side.

"The driver paid me with two dimes and a nickel. He wore a cap, cocked on one side of his head, exposing a shock of reddish hair. All four were young and tough looking and there conversation was hard-boiled.

"They looked to me just like a gang who would do a thing like the killing of Gilleland. One of them inquired of the driver if he was going to get any gas and he asked if the indicator read empty. When told it did not, he said he did not want any gas.

"I was still thinking about them, about four o'clock, two policemen told me of the shooting and I immediately connected the four fellows with it."

Patrolman Gilleland was appointed to the force as a reserve officer May 22, 1924. He was made a regular January 6, 1926. During the war he was with the 12th Infantry. He lived with his family at 7 Valley pl.

His mother lives at 9 Garfield ave., Medford, together with the slain officer's four unmarried sisters, Mary, Catherine, Elizabeth Agnes. There are two married sisters, Mrs. Daniel Driscoll and Mrs. John King of Boston, and a brother, John Edward Gilleland of Medford.

$1000 PENSION FOR WIDOW OF POLICEMAN

An annual pension of $1,000 will be given the widow of Policeman Francis J. Gilleland of Medford, murdered by thugs, it was declared today by Mayor Edward H. Larkin after he had offered a reward of $500 for the slayers.

Mayor Larkin said he would offer the pension order tomorrow night at a meeting of the Medford board of aldermen and that passage of the order was assured.

The law limits the amount of pension to the widow of a policeman giving his life in the course of duty, to $1,000, otherwise the city would award a higher sum annually, the Mayor explained.

The reward was offered under authority held by the mayor to offer, without aldermanic sanction, rewards not exceeding $500. It is understood, however, that an order for a larger reward will be placed before the board of aldermen.

The Mayor termed the killing "one of the most atrocious and brutal in the history of Medford."

A pathetic feature of the crime is that the policeman's widow, mother of two children and foster-mother to two more, is left destitute and practically with no money for temporary needs.

EXTENSION OF L RULE, DIVIDEND CUT FAVORED

Three pieces of legislation affecting the Elevated, were today unanimously reported in the Senate by the legislative committee of 15 appointed at the suggestion of Gov. Fuller.

The first was a bill for a 12-year extension of public control, and the reduction of dividends to 8 per cent.

The second was a resolve calling for appointment of a commission of seven by the governor to investigate additional rapid transit lines and the improvement of those existing; ways and means of financing them and the apportionment of the cost.

The third was a bill directing the trustees to accept the order for extension of the subway under Governor sq. to be built by the Boston Rapid Transit Commission, with plans approved by the Department of Public Utilities, the trustees to lease the subway when completed. The measure provides annual rental to be paid by the road be ½ of 1 per cent in excess of the interest on the bonds. This ½ of 1 per cent would go into the sinking fund to retire the bonds.

He Drops Dead After Discussing Murder of Policeman

In an uncanny aftermath of the murder of Patrolman Gilleland in Medford, death today suddenly struck down Charles Lewis, 45, of Harnden rd., Somerville.

Lewis was a plumber employed in a new apartment block on Mountain ave., Malden. He was discussing the murder with fellow-workmen.

"When a fellow leaves home to go to work he never knows if he'll e evgret home alive," he remarked.

The next moment he dropped dead. A heart attack is believed to have been the cause. Lewis, who was a member of the Odd Fellows, leaves a wife.

"Bring us home some fireworks for the Fourth," called four eager little girls as Patrolman Francis Gilleland left his home, 7 Valley pl., Medford, last night to go on special duty at the bonfire in Medford.

"Sure. Lots of fireworks," the father and uncle of the children promised, gaily throwing a kiss to each and to his wife. Two of the group were his own daughters, Mildred, 9, and Doris, 5, while the other two he had adopted three weeks ago when his wife's sister died, leaving a baby, 3, Edith, 11, and Melvin, four and one-half.

"Oh, he comforted me when Elsie went," Mrs. Gilleland sobbed.

"He told me I would always have him and he would see that Elsie's babies never had to go to an institution, so we took the two girls and his grandfather took the little boy. But now Francis himself is gone, shot down without a chance to speak. Oh, what will become of the children now?"

Officer Gilleland never believed in insurance and his widow is left with the four children, penniless.

"He felt so strongly about lawlessness that he often talked at breakfast about the increase in crime," Mrs. Gilleland went on despairingly. "When the car barn bandits were executed he took it terribly to heart.

"He remarked that though they killed the murderers it did not stop crime. He little dreamed that he would be a victim of thugs."

Mrs. Gilleland became hysterical when she learned of the tragic death of her husband. She threw herself into the arms of her chum, Mrs. Lottie Drinkwater, who lives next door, and screamed: "Oh, Lottie, they've killed Frank, they've killed him."

"He never missed a day coming to see me," his white-haired mother, Mrs. Mary Gilleland, added. "He came over to have a cup of tea with me before he went on duty—a custom of several years standing, and he was always such a good son and father that we are not able to realize that he is never coming back."

The slain man's mother lived on Garfield ave., Medford.

Bar Propaganda From School, Says N.E.A. Head

Minneapolis, July 2 (AP)—The National Education Association in the opinion of its president, Miss Cornelia S. Adair of Richmond, Va., should exercise the utmost care to "avoid introduction into the public schools of propaganda of a kind that will bias future judgments of children."

"The public schools in the United States are attended by more than 20,000,000 Americans at the most impressionable period of their lives," said Miss Adair, a speaker at the opening session of the association's 66th convention today. "The slant of their thinking will determine the public policy of tomorrow."

Miss Adair said well trained young persons will be forced into other work unless they get better salaries.

LYNN WOMEN QUARREL; ONE IS STABBED

A knife thrust only a few inches from the heart ended abruptly today a quarrel between two women in Lynn.

Eight stitches were taken in the wound, suffered by Mrs. Mildred Gallagher of Broad st., Lynn.

Mrs. Jennie Shanton of Center st., West Lynn, was arrested in Somerville, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and arraigned in Lynn court and was held in $1000 for a hearing Friday.

Mrs. Shanton, police say, admitted the stabbing with a bread knife and declared she struck during a quarrel over a diamond ring purchased by her husband.

Neighbors telephoned Lynn police headquarters today that a "riot" was taking place in the Gallagher apartment in Broad st.

Mrs. Shanton, after her arrest, told police that on Saturday an installment house collector called at her home and sought two back payments on a ring she declared her husband had purchased.

Mrs. Shanton said she went looking for Mrs. Gallagher, but did not find her in until today. Two men accompanied Mrs. Shanton to the apartment.

ELOPING BRIDE JILTS MAN HER FATHER CHOSE

Miss Doris Keshishian, 18, of Cypress st., Watertown, who disappeared from home two weeks after her engagement was announced to Charles Shehenian of Quimby st., that town, returned today and announced she was the wife of John P. Bazarian, 21, of Laurel st.

The girl told Chief of Police John F. Millmore, who had been asked to search for her, that she was married to the man of her choice at Hartford on June 23.

The couple were missed from Watertown on June 23 and the girl's parents told the police they feared Bazarian had kidnaped her. The new Mrs. Bazarian said Shehenian was her father's choice, but she refused to be governed by old world customs, and selected her own husband.

WILKINS AND EIELSON GREETED IN NEW YORK

New York, July 2 (AP)—Capt. George Wilkins and Lieut. Ben. Eielson, who flew from Alaska to Spitzbergen over the polar ice, landed today to receive one of New York's welcomes to daring fliers. They arrived on the Norwegian steamship Stavangerfjord, were met at Quarantine by the mayor's reception committee and brought to the Battery, then escorted to City Hall over the route already traversed by Lindbergh, Chamberlin and Byrd. Among the first to greet them was Ole Eielson of Hatton, N. D., father of the lieutenant.

KILLS WIFE BECAUSE SHE ALWAYS WANTED MONEY

Hackensack, N. J., July 2 (INS)—William Ballardo, 27, walked into police headquarters and announced he had strangled his 18-year-old wife because she "was always asking for money and always wanted to go to the movies."

SMITH LEADING IN HUB'S BIG STRAW VOTE

with only 5 registering a similar change in the opposite direction. Returns from Precinct 3, located at the passenger entrance to the North Station, had not been received.

The Park st. booth, shortly before noon, reported a total vote of 491, of which three ballots were thrown out for improper marking. Of the total number of votes cast, Hoover received 86 and Smith 257. One hundred and three voters indicated that they voted for Coolidge in 1924, a d 44 for Davis, the switch from Coolidge to Smith being 46, and from Davis to Hoover being 4.

Precinct 2, the South Station, at the end of two hours reported a total vote of 222, with 36 for Hoover and 106 for Smith. In 1924, 49 voted for Coolidge and 26 for Davis, the change from Coolidge to Smith being 23 and from Davis to Hoover only one.

Many of the voters failed to indicate their vote in the 1924 election. Three ballots were thrown out for improper marking and there were two blanks.

The three booths were the first of a number which the Boston Evening American is installing in various parts of the city where large numbers of the public pass or congregate.

RUSH AT NOON

The American believes the voters have determined their preference in the presidential campaign, and has sufficient confidence in their integrity to feel sure there will be no repeating.

The American further believes that the public has more than a passing interest in the conduct of an honest, straightforward straw vote, and is ready to co-operate in obtaining it.

The booths, in charge of pretty girls, were hardly set up before crowds began to gather, attracted by the signs. Then the demand for ballots began, to continue throughout the day, with a heavy upward trend at noon.

The throng on the Common contained many women and girls, who apparently for the first time were taking an interest in a presidential election.

"How do you mark the ballot?" was a frequent question, and "Who are you going to vote for?" was another.

Al Smith admirers seemed to predominate at the Common, judging from the comments overheard, with sentiment more evenly divided at the two big railroad terminals.

"Hey, Anna, who you gonna vote for?" a shrill voiced flapper inquired.

"Aw, don't be dumb," came the crushing retort. "Who would I vote for but Al Smith? He's gonna get beer for my dad an' then we can get along with him again."

PRAISE FOR HOOVER

Nearby a fashionably dressed shopper was heard extolling the merits of Herbert Hoover to an apparently bored woman companion.

"Positively, my dear, he feeds the starving with his own hand," she declared emphatically. "It's simply marvelous the things that man does, stopping the Mississippi flood and everything."

And so it went, with an ever increasing demand for ballots.

It was apparent that for the first time in many years an unusual interest is being displayed in a presidential election. Men and women in all walks of life are going out of their way to obtain the American's straw ballots and register their preferences.

The polling places will continue to be located in prominent places for a considerable time, and will be in charge of attendants who will instruct the voters in the simple rudiments of casting a ballot.

There are only two questions for each voter: Which shall he or she vote for in the coming election? and whom did he or she vote for at the last presidential election?

The names of both Republican and Democratic candidates in the coming and the last election are given on the ballots, and all that is necessary for the voter to do is to make a mark. The balloting is absolutely secret as far as the identity of the voter is concerned.

Watch the Evening American for daily results.

of Spitzbergen, but a recurrence of fever prevented him.

It appeared that the injuries to his leg and back were not improving as rapidly as expected. He was still suffering from the effects of his long stay on the ice without medical attention.

The paper said Comdr. Romagna of the base ship Citta di Milano and the Swedish and Finnish authorities had agreed that three seaplanes, two Italian and one Swedish, would fly together on a searching expedition as soon as the weather cleared.

Ice-Breaker Blockaded in Hunt for Nobile Party

Copyrighted, 1928, by the Associated Press.

Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, July 2 (AP)—The powerful Russian ice-breaker Krassin, which has been battering her way along the northwest coast of Northeast Land toward the Nobile radio party, has been balked by heavy ice blocking her way and will now try to make her way through Hinlopen Strait along the southern and eastern coast of Northeast Land to the stranded party.

4 GIRLS, 3 MEN ARE CAUGHT IN WOODS RAID

A back-to-nature impulse with a Babes-in-the-Woods setting carried four maids and three youths into the toils of Saugus police today following a hurry call from shocked residents of the district that borders Saugus woods.

Theodore R. Johnson of Cliftondale, Alexander J. Volto of Chelsea and Samuel Corsor of Saugus formed the male contingent, while three sisters, the Misses Louise M., eJnnie F., and Isabella Sparks of Revere and Margaret Allen of Revere were the girls. Unromantic officers charged all with disorderly conduct.

They were in a clearing more than a mile from the roadway, police said, when Captain John T. Stuart and a squad of police "crashed the gate."

Corsor fled, a streak of white, while the six submitted to arrest. He walked into the Saugus police station later, however, a sorry spectacle from mosquito bites. He was then clad in overalls and slippers.

A gallon jug of alleged liquor was found in the clearing and will be presented in Saugus court Thursday as evidence.

YOUNGEST BURGLAR, 8, CAUGHT LOOTING SAFE

Cedar Rapids, Ia., July 2 (INS)—Raymond Smith, 8 years old, the youngest burglar ever arrested here, will be taken to the reform school at Eldora today to remain until he is 21 years old.

Despite his extreme youth, the boy has a "record" that compares with many veterans in this line. He was captured while looting the safe of a local tire company and was on "parole" at the time.

PATRICK O'KEEFE, 96, CIVIL WAR VET, DEAD

Patrick O'Keefe, 96, G. A. R. veteran, is died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. William Johnson, in South Bostop.

He will be buried from the Gate of Heaven Church tomorow morning at 9 o'clock. Interment will be at Mt. Vernon Cemetery.

Hunt Kin of Dead Man

The police were asked today to try to find relatives of John Scott, also known as John Foley, a Boston seaman, drowned in New York on June 25. According to a letter signed, "H. Johnson, 56 Sullivan st., Brooklyn," Scott was 27 or 28 years old and fell off a boat.

Once she couldn't hold a job....

—now the highest paid girl in the office

I'M sorry, Miss Scott—but we just can't use you any more. It's all I can say."

Fired again! Why? They couldn't explain—and she couldn't guess.

But that very day she discovered the reason. The girls were whispering about it and she happened to overhear. "B.O."—body odor.

That's the last job Miss Scott ever lost. For since she learned what her handicap was and how to overcome it, her natural ability and charm—unspoiled by this unpardonable social error—have won her promotion after promotion—and a host of friends, besides.

When a Man Goes in for Washing Dishes

"THE best housekeeper I ever had," said a young married woman the other day, "was a man.

"It was in a little village down in Maine where we lived for two years. Maids were scarce and I prevailed upon Joe to help me in the house. Joe had been in the Navy, and later had had his own fishing schooner.

"I have never known a woman who was so scrupulously neat as Joe. The way he washed dishes, for instance, was a lesson in efficiency.

"First he scraped and piled them all according to size. He used Lux for the suds in the dishpan, because, he said, Lux made better suds in half the time of anything else, also because Lux was easier on his hands.

"Sailors, he said, use Lux because their hands are often badly chapped and broken and Lux is soothing.

"Now I myself follow Joe's plan in doing dishes, and I always use Lux. The difference it has made in the looks of my hands is really amazing. Lux keeps them so white and smooth, that I've passed on the hint to my friends."

Because Lux contains none of the harmful alkali found in many household soaps, whether flakes, chips or cakes, it never irritates even the most sensitive skin, never dries the delicate oils of the hands.

And the big package of Lux washes 6 weeks' dishes.

DEMOCRATS AT HOME, SINGING 'VICTORY'

Greeted by thousands and ready for an intensive campaign for Governor Smith, Massachusetts delegates to the Houston convention returned on the Democratic special today.

Senator Walsh, chairman of the Massachusetts "Solid Smith" delegation, left the party at Buffalo on account of pressing business in Washington.

"It was the greatest convention since 1854," Gen. Charles H. Cole, Democratic candidate for Governor, said as he left the train.

"It might be described as a wedding of the North and South. It is the first time since the Civil War that the North and South stood completely united at a Democratic convention. It spells but one thing —victory."

Former Mayor James M. Curley praised the harmony of the convention in a speech to the throng at South Station.

"The harmonious conduct of the convention, strength of platform and the popularity of the candidates I assure a united party in November. A united party means success to the Democratic ticket," he said.

A drive for 125,000 new Democrats was announced by Mayor Quinn of Cambridge, national committeeman.

"Preparations have already been made on the train for an intensive campaign," he said, "particularly in every city and town of the State. More than 125,000 new names will be added to our rolls to insure a sweeping victory."

Led by Jimmy Coughlin's "Royal Rooter's" band, the welcomers swarmed on the platform as the special with bell clanging, for Engineer Fred W. Teece is a Springfield Democrat—arrived.

Gen. Edward L. Logan, former City Councillor George F. Gilbody and Col. Thomas F. Murphy led the welcomers.

"Al's Belt Line Steak" Mystery Is Solved

The "belt line steak" mystery, born of Governor Al Smith's declaration that that is one of his favorite edibles, was cleared up today by Henry Hoey of the Boston Evening American, veteran fletcherizer and man-about nourishment.

"Belt line steak" is nothing more than the "fat edge rump" special that used to be set before the hungry but discriminating diner in Mother Atkinson's on Newspaper Row in the old days, according to Henry.

"We used to get that steak, with harmonious accompaniment in the way of vegetables and the like, for 35 cents," Henry reminisced. "The favorite combination was fat edge rump with beans dry, that is with most of the moisture heated out of them. You never hear of a rump steak in New York by that name."

SENATE PROBES ARE RESUMED

Washington, July 2 (INS)—Both conventions over, a host of Congressional investigations sprang into renewed life today.

Plans were made for continuance of five Senatorial inquiries ordered by Congress. These are:

1—An investigation of the Salt Creek, Wyo., oil fields by the Senate Public Lands and Surveys committee.

2—Investigation of factors surrounding the sinking of the submarine S4 in December off Provincetown, Mass., by a sub-committee of the Senate Naval Affairs committee.

3—Inquiry into New Jersey Senatorial primaries campaign expenditures and practices during the recent contests in which Hamilton Fish Kean was nominated to a seat in the United States Senate, by Reed Slush Fund committee.

4—Conclusion of probes into preconvention Presidential campaign expenditures by a special Senate committee headed by Senator Steiwer (R.) of Oregon.

5—A probe to determine whether political offices were "sold" in Georgia and other states, by a subcommittee of the Senate Postoffices and Roads committee.

REPORT ONE OF FOUR TINY YACHTS RACING TO SPAIN

New York, July 2 (INS)—First word of one of the four small sailing yachts which are braving the Atlantic in one of the sportiest races on record came from New York to Santander, Spain, was relayed to New York today by the United States destroyers Davis and Wilkes. The message reported the Pinta, William J. Curtis, Jr., owner and skipper, directly south of Deer Island, Me., more than 250 miles from New York.

The four small sailing ships started from Ambrose Light Saturday. No reports were received of the other three entries, th Mohawk, the Nina and the Isabella, on which Mrs. William Roos, wife of the owner, is sailing as a regular member of the crew.

London, July 2 (AP)—Viscount Byng of Vimy, former Governor-General of Canada and one of the outstanding British generals during the World War, will become commissioner of police next autumn, Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, today told the House of Commons. Sir William Horwood, present commissioner, will retire.

GERMAN FLIERS TRYING FOR ENDURANCE RECORD

Desseau, Germany, July 2 (INS)—Aviators Johann Risties and Wilhelm Zimmermann hopped off here at 3:45 a. m. today in an effort to break the world's aviation endurance record of 58 hours and 36 minutes. They are flying a Junkers plane—a sister ship of the transatlantic monoplane Bremen.

U. S. TELLS HOW TO KILL OFF MOTHS, FLEAS

Washington, June 2 (INS)—Scientific methods of getting rid of two of America's leading pests—clothes moths and fleas—were divulged today by the Agricultural Department.

Sunlight, cleaning, storage in paper, cold storage, chemical control with naphalene, paradichlorobenzene and camphor were advocated in liberal quantities to get rid of moths.

The suggestion was made that women's clubs and neighborhood organizations form co-operative anti-moth bodies and buy insecticides by the barrel.

Keep animals and poultry out from under the house if you want to keep the fleas away, was one suggestion. The sad news that there are 500 species of fleas existing, most of which are well organized and campaigning in the United States was disclosed. All of them have fearful appetites and the world's record for a flea jump is 13 inches. As they hit after the jump they bite.

ZIONIST FACTION IN CONTEST FOR CONTROL

Pittsburgh, July 2 (INS)—Members of the Zionist organization of America went into their second day's session of their 31st annual convention today divided into factions fighting for control of the organization. Late today the committee on nominations is scheduled to report. Two factions, one composed of adherents of Louis Lipsky, president, and the other to adherents of Rabbi Stephen Wise, are fighting vigorously for the leadership.

W. H. VANDERBILT LIKELY TO BE CASINO THEATER PRESIDENT, SAYS BETTY ALDEN

Arthur Curtiss James Sailing Yacht Aloha Between Newport and New York

WITHOUT DOUBT YOUNG WILLIAM HENRY VANDERBILT is to be president of the Newport Casino Theater. Honors and rewards in plenty accrue to this financial magnate, polo'st, patron of arts and pleasant young gentleman. Now he is about to step into the place left vacant by the late Moses Taylor and so become the leading light and guiding star in the Casino Theater's second season of festivals.

A MOMENTOUS MEETING takes place today and should the smiling and kindly young master of many millions and beautiful Oakland Farm emerge as Casino Theater president, keen will be the rejoicing along Bellevue ave. Of course, the passing of Moses Taylor left a great vacancy in the ranks but says everyone, who, better than young Mr. Vanderbilt is there to assume this leadership. Messrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Oliver Gould Jennings and James Stewart Cushman believe so and are likely to translate the belief into fact.

GAYEST OF THE GAY, WILL be the theater season and just as charming as in its heyday, when a Stanford White designed the place for a James Gordon Bennett, the cream and gold theater awaits the rising curtain on July 10 Restoration, lovingly done, has left the delicate basket work, the gold leaf crystal chandeliers, and side arches true to the beauties of yesterday.

THOSE FROM THE NEWPORT social chronicle who take glitter and glory are boxholders. Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mrs. W. Goadby Loew, Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Oliver Gold Jennings, Mme. Maxim Karolik, Mrs. Hugh Auchincloss, James Stewart Cushman, the Bruce Merrimans, Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church, Jr., Mrs. Shaw Safe, Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice, Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons, James Henry Van Alan, Henry Clews. So reads the boxholder list in part.

MISS EDITH WETMORE, THE Marion Eppleys, Mrs. Roderick Terry, Henry Walters, Miss Alice Brayton, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Clark are on the long list that insures a brilliant opening. The Cameron McRae Winslows have seats, and will entertain much out the season, so has Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer and Mrs. Henry W. Putnam, the Robert Potters, the Cornelius Tanzemans, Mrs. Guy Norman, the Charles Richardsons, Dr. Truman Saunders, Miss Sylvia Hillhouse, the Hamilton Fish Webster, etc., etc.

DINNERS AND LUNCHEONS, teas and dances sparkle through July days and evenings, sandwiched in between stage appearances, as they must be when great ladies of the theater are honored by great ladies of society. Newport looks lively with anticipation toward the youthful Vanderbilt, master at Oakland Farm, and the entertaining for visiting stage luminaries likely to eventuate there. Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons returns to Newport next week, and under her kindly pressure her Vanderbilt son Winsor will become the social figure family place and inheritance demand.

AS PROMOTER OF POLO FOR the millionaire colony, William Henry Vanderbilt shines this summer in a role new to him. A velvet stretch of turf smooth as Newport's smoothest lawn newly arranged at Oakland Farm reminds one of similar fields at the North Shore. All the James Van Alan polo string or nearly all is housed in spacious Oakland Farm stables and practice polo enlivens Newport days that are plentifully exciting as it is. Match polo in Newport added to invitation tennis and gold mashie golf, horse shows and the fashion parade promise the variety life demands as spice.

TODAY THE FIRST TIME THIS season, tea is to be served on the Casino lawn. Society taking its afternoon cup may listen to music sweetly rendered by a masterly sort of musicians recruited as the Boston Little Symphony from the Hub's famous orchestral aggregation.

A PRETTIER SIGHT WOULD be difficult to find than the Casino horse shoe lawn of an afternoon dotted with bright umbrellas shading tea tables from the sun's late slanting rays. Society in its best bib and tucker gives the picture its final touch.

THE YACHT ALOHA'S tall spars and stately lines are likely to decorate Newport's waterfront this July, since the Arthur Curtiss James craft is not a contender in the Spanish race as was expected. Instead of heading over the bounding billows toward Santander and the King of Spain Cup, the sea going Aloha is sailing back and forth between New York and Newport at the will of her owner as Mr. James varies between Wall Street and Bellevue ave.

CAUGHT IN ACT, THIEF SHOOTS AND RUNS

Montague, July 2 (AP)—While a man who had been deputized by a constable to investigate a break into a store here early today was grappling with a neighbor whom he supposed to be a burglar, the actual burglar shot the neighbor and escaped.

The bullet entered the jaw of the neighbor, Benjamin Lawrence, but was later removed at a hospital, where it was said he would recover.

Members of a family living over the store of Evan Buckmaster heard a noise in the store and telephoned to the nearest constable. The constable, who was ill, sent Albert Clark to the store.

Clark arrived as a burglar was climbing out the window. He seized the man and called for help. Lawrence appeared and Clark mistook him for an accomplice of the burglar, and turned his attention to Lawrence. The burglar discharged his pistol and disappeared, dropping a bundle of checks taken from the open store safe.

TOUPIN TO RUN IN R. I. ON A "SMITH PLATFORM"

Toupin declared that his fight in this state has been similar to that of Governor Smith of New York as the Rhode Island delegation to Houston voted for Smith, he will run on a "Smith true government" platform.

AROOSTOOK ROAD CUTS OUT TRAINS TO BANGOR

Bangor, Me., July 2 (AP)—For the first time since the Bangor & Aroostook Railroad was organized in 1891 its trains do not run into this city. Failure to renew a contract for the renting of B. & A. trains over Maine Central Railroad tracks into the Bangor station has led the northern road to withdraw its passenger equipment and locomotives to Northern Maine Junction, five and one-half miles west.

A new adjustment of schedules calls for passenger traffic to change cars at this junction for travel in and out of Bangor.

Will Save Time

THE next time you are at your wits end to think up a new dessert for the Sunday dinner do try this novel ice cream pie which was originated by a famous Boston chef.

Its principal ingredients are a simple layer cake, some pure ice cream and whipped cream. In the Martha Lee Kitchen—and in my own home—time and trouble are saved by using a layer cake that you will find at your favorite grocer's.

It is a sponge layer, carefully packed, and comes to you from an immaculate bakery. It is our standby for all sorts of filled cakes, Washington pies, strawberry shortcakes, etc. Best of all, its price is 25c for two luscious layers.

This is regular old-fashioned back-on-the-farm cake, you know the kind—made from fresh country eggs, newly laid, just brought in milk, and soft white flour. We only use one layer for the ice cream pie and keep the other for a Washington pie made by cutting the layer in two and filling it with either a cream filling or jam.

But to get back to our ice cream pie. Place one layer of the cake on a serving dish. Then on half of the layer arrange a pint of vanilla ice cream.

On the other half of the layer chocolate ice cream is arranged. Then over all spread whipped cream sweetened and flavored. Then put the ice cream pie in the ice box for 15 minutes to one-half hour before serving.

Or the ice cream may be thickly masked with a meringue of beaten egg whites and sugar and browned for a moment in hot oven, in the style of the famous Baked Alaska.

If you can think of anything more delicious than this combination send me in the suggestion. It will be worth its weight in gold.

HOOVER FAVORS RECOGNIZING NEW CHINA

Washington, July 2—The Nationalist government of China may be recognized formally by the United States at an early date, it was indicated in a high official quarter.

The situation depends upon developments as the various Chinese armies are demobilized and the ability of the Nationalists leaders to control the generals who are big political factors.

The American Government has asked diplomatic and consular representatives in China for specific information before taking definite action.

At the same time it was stated that President Coolidge, Secretary of State Kellogg and the Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover (the latter spent many years in China), have the very warmest feeling for the Nationalist movement and trust that it will be possible to extend formal recognition at an early date.

The United States has already extended de facto recognition to the Nanking, or Nationalist, government. That came about automatically when Minister MacMurray, at Peking, entered into negotiations with Nationalist representatives some time ago.

Mrs. Shonnard Gets Divorce

Paris, July 2 (INS)—The Seine Tribunal today granted a divorce to Mrs. Horatio Seymour Shonnard, who is well known in New York social circles. Mrs. Shonnard, who is the former Elizabeth Joyce, charged that her husband deserted her. She married Shonnard in Andover, Mass., January 30, 1909.

SMITH STARTS MAPPING OUT CAMPAIGN

New York, July 2 (AP)—Governor Smith was in New York today for informal conferences at which he will thrash out the details of his campaign for the Presidency with a few close friends.

The first meeting of the National Democratic committee is not until July 11 but it is generally believed that before that time the governor will have decided exactly what course he will follow and will merely inform the committee of his decisions.

Those close to the governor say that he intends to decide all important matters relative to the campaign himself, and that the national committee will follow his directions rather than act in an advisory capacity.

Today he had appointments at his headquarters in the Biltmore with persons whose political acumen he respects, but their identity and the nature of the discussions he intended to have with them was not made public.

He has already decided to limit his two months campaign to about 15 speeches in various parts of the country. They will all be broadcast, and there will be no back platform talks to station crowds as the campaign train moves from one chosen city to another.

There will probably be one speech in this city, one in New Jersey, three in New England, one each in Detroit, St. Louis and Denver, and the rest in the border states with one possible appearance in a west coast city.

The governor's first speech since his nomination will be the Tammany Society's annual Fourth of July celebration. Advertisements in New York newspapers announce that "patriotic speeches" will be delivered by the Governor and Senators Copeland and Wagner. "All citizens of the United States and lovers of Americanism are cordially invited," the advertisement says. The speeches are to be radiocast.

Obregon is expected to tour Mexico and then possibly go to the United States before assuming office. Observers predicted that he would confer with the American president-elect in regard to the policies of the new administrations regarding relations between the two republics.

Speed Is Chief Cause of Deaths--Goodwin

By FRANK A. GOODWIN

Highway Safety Editor Boston Evening American and Former Registrar of Motor Vehicles for Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

A few weeks ago there was a meeting in Hartford, Ct., of officials from many Eastern states having charge of compiling and analyzing statistics in motor vehicle departments.

The dean of these statisticians is Chauncey Hubbell, who has acted in that capacity for Massachusetts since 1920. The meeting was held for the purpose of bringing about uniformity of methods and it is a matter of great pride that the analysis sheet adopted by the conference was virtually the one adopted by Massachusetts in 1920.

When ever a fatal or serious motor accident occurs an inspector investigates and checks off on this sheet vital information. The sheet makes it possible for the inspector to relate whether the operator was licensed or not, whether a passenger car, motorcycle or truck was involved, whether the accident happened in city or town, day or night, straight road, curve or intersection, wet or dry weather, how fast car was going, age of the pedestrian or occupant killed, fault and causes.

F. A. Goodwin.

It is useless to expect to cut down accidents unless you can analyze the cause. I was speaking at a meeting a few nights ago and in the question period at the end of the address, a man asked me if bad eyesight was not one of the principal causes of accidents.

ROADS IN GOOD SHAPE

This was followed by the question as to whether or not a deaf and dumb operator was not a menace on the highway. I have before me the cumulative analysis sheet for the 1927 fatal accidents. This shows that last year there were 647 accidents in which 693 persons were killed.

It shows further that only four accidents happened because the operator's eyesight was bad, and only one where the hearing was a contributing factor.

Under the heading of mental disability, the record shows none, but, of course, that is the opinion of cold-blooded inspectors, who come to their conclusions without any personal interest in the matter.

I think it is safe to say that someone might be found who would think that each operator in a fatal accident was plumb crazy. Only 23 cases were recorded where the operator was inexperienced.

There were forty accidents, in which there were 57 deaths, where drunken operators were definitely known to be involved, and 15 railroad crossing accidents, in which 19 persons were killed.

SPEED IS CHIEF CAUSE

That Massachusetts has its roads in wonderful condition is testified to by the fact that only two fatal accidents were the results of defects in the highway.

There were only 16 deaths caused by defective headlights, and two because of defective tail lights.

WELL—you ask, "WHAT CAUSES ALL THE ACCIDENTS?" SPEED!

That is the answer, and that does not mean any certain number of miles per hour, because ten miles an hour migh be crazy on Winter st., Boston, while 35 or more might be all right on straight stretches with no intersections.

This analysis sheet I have been speaking of which graphically pictures the causes of the 647 fatal motor accidents for 1927 says that 410 were caused by "TOO FAST FOR CONDITIONS."

That means that operators of automobiles involved in 410 accidents causing 450 deaths were going so fast that they were not able to control their cars when a dangerous emergency suddenly presented itself.

THE A-B-C OF DRIVING

If this percentage holds true in the non-fatal accidents in which 31,721 persons were injured last year, and it no doubt did, then 20,000 persons were injured because operators were going TOO FAST FOR CONDITIONS.

Well, now you selfish, rushing motorists who wish to get somewhere of NOWHERE, in a hurry at the risk of killing and maiming your fellow man, don't you think it about time to learn the A-B-C of driving—ALWAYS BE CAREFUL?

Can't you visualize the sorrow and suffering you may cause by going TOO FAST FOR CONDITIONS?

Of course you can. If you will only STOP TO THINK.

PLEASE DO.

WEDDING SALAD WAS FATAL

Tracing responsibility for the deaths of two and sickness of thirty wedding guests at Chicopee last week, the State Department of Public Health today announced that typhoid germs in chicken salad was the cause of the epidemic that followed the wedding of Wilford Beaupre and Bernadette Breton.

A Springfield woman, maker of the salad, was adjudged a typhoid carrier, though Commissioner Bigelow asserted she was unaware of her condition.

Tests that revealed the germs and the woman's story of a mystery illness eighteen years ago led to the belief that typhoid was the illness. She was cautioned to refrain from handling food intended for others.

HOLYOKE MAN ACCUSED OF TAKING BANK FUNDS

William A. Reed, bookkeeper for the City National Bank of Holyoke, was arrested today by deputy U. S. marshals on a secret indictment charging him with misapplication of the bank's funds.

The indictment charges that from January of 1926, through 1927 and 1928, Reed misappropriated a total of $1,200. According to Assistant U. S. Attorney John J. Walsh, Jr., however, the bank suffered to the extent of several thousands of dollars. Reed was to be arraigned late today before Judge James A. Lowell in federal district court.

39 MINERS RESCUED WHEN DAM GOES OUT

Mount Carmel, Pa., July 2 (AP)—Thirty-nine miners at work in the Locust Spring colliery of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Company were trapped today when a dam went out as the result of recent rains, but all were saved. Only one man, who was suffering from shock, required medical attention.

MAINE TO HAVE A HUGE WATER POWER PLANT

Augusta, Me., July 2 (AP)—Stockholders of the Central Maine Power Company today received formal announcement of the projected construction of a $7,000,000 hydro-electric development on the Upper Kennebec river. The development, which will be the largest of its kind in New England, will include a 60,000-horsepower station with a 90-foot dam. It will be completed in the spring of 1931.

Financial support has been extended by Martin J. Insull, president of the Middle West Utilities Company, who is now in Maine on an inspection tour. The Central Maine Power Company is a subsidiary of the Middle West Corporation.

The new power project, situated just above the town of Bingham, 75 miles north of here, will extend nine miles back on the Kennebec river. The dam will impound five billion cubic feet of water and generate 190,000,000 kilowatt hours a year. Nearly 1000 men will be employed in its construction. Work will begin next spring.

HICKMAN BEATS UP CELLMATE

San Quentin Prison, Cal., July 2 (INS)—Sullen and taciturn, William E. Hickman, kidnaper-slayer of Marion Parker, refused today to disclose the reason for his vicious battle with his cell mate, Joseph Troche.

Aroused by the noise of the struggle, guards arrived at Hickman's cell to see him astride Troche and beating the prostrate man over the head with the leg of a stool.

The former Kansas City youth was in a frenzy of rage a he battled Troche, who was bleeding and almost unconscious when rescued. He was taken to the prison hospital but would not say why he was attacked.

Hickman bore few marks of the struggle. He would not tell why he turned on his cell mate.

CHICAGO CITIZENS RAISE $100,000 TO HALT CRIME

Chicago, July 2 (AP)—An indication that Chicago citizens are willing to dig into their pockets to help rid the city of crime is found in the public subscription of approximately $100,000 to pay the expenses of a special grand jury investigation into alleged politico-criminal alliances.

An appeal was made for subscriptions after the county board had failed to appropriate money to carry on the inquiry. The total needed—$150,000—is expected to be fully subscribed before the end of the week.

Does Lilly Finally Marry Town's Richest Man?

The Boston Evening American today begins the publication of "Money Love," Beatrice Burton's latest and greatest novel.

Lilly Lexington, the only daughter of Cyrus Lexington, was spoiled and she was pert and impudent. Mrs. Lexington knew Lily could marry money if only she would—and she prayed that Lily would.

In the whole wide world there probably was no one more beautifully useless than Lily Lexington at the time she became of age. She thought money was everything. She got herself engaged to the richest man in town. Did she marry him? Lily decides! Which way?

CHAPTER 1.

AT 10 o'clock on a stormy March morning last year Lily Lexington opened her eyes upon a world that had always been wonderfully kind to her.

All her life it had treated her like the spoiled child of Fortune that she was.

It had coddled her and pampered her. It had granted every wish and every whim that she had ever had. Every one!

And now, at 22, Lily was discontented and restless and unhappy—as might have been expected. She was exactly like a child who has had "too much Christmas." Too much candy, too many toys, too much fun and excitement.

She looked like a spoiled child, too, on this particular March morning, with her gray-green eyes full of sleep, her mouth a sulky, velvety bow, her golden-red hair a curly, tousled mass above a frowning forehead.

"Oh, dear—" She yawned, stretched herself, and sighed deeply, in that unhappy sigh was all her dissatisfaction with life in general.

Then she held up her left hand and looked at the large diamond that decorated her engagement finger. Her frown deepened. The corners of her mouth drooped unhappily. "Oh, dear—" she sighed once more, turning the glittering thing slowly upon her finger.

As she sat up in bed the door of the room opened slowly and her mother poked her head into the opening. It was a very imposing head, crowned with iron-gray hair, dressed in a high pompadour.

"You're awake, Lily!" Mrs. Lexington's voice was rich and full, but it had a note of sharpness in it just as her full, richly-colored face had a sharp look about it sometimes.

She was tall and heavy, but she moved with a surprising swiftness. Her pink linen housedress crackled like paper, some keys in her pocket jingled, and her heels clicked on the polished floor as she went around the room putting down the windows. She was as full of energy as an electric fan.

"Let me see your ring again, Lily," she said, pulling up a chair to the side of the bed. Her eyes warmed as she looked at it, and then at her daughter's lovely, sullen face. "I've always wanted you to marry Staley Drummond. His ring is just like him—substantial and good. It must weigh all of three karats, Lily, that diamond!"

"Three karats," the girl repeated, lifelessly, and from her tone she might have been saying "carrots" instead of "karats."

Somewhere in the big, comfortable house a bell rang shrilly, and her eyes went to the gilt telephone that stood on the table beside her bed.

"If that's Staley, tell him I'm asleep, Mother," she said quickly. "Tell him I'll be home this afternoon at 5 if he wants to see me."

Her mother stared at her. "But, dear, he probably wants to see you now, on his way down town," she said with a cold, sweetly air. "He's been engaged to you less than 12 hours, and naturally—"

"You heard what I said!" Lily interrupted, and her lips came together with a snap. She dropped back upon her pillows and turning her brilliant gaze upon the ceiling.

It was Staley Drummond on the telephone and Mrs. Lexington gave him Lily's message. "She's going out this afternoon, Staley," she told him in her very best voice. "But she'll be home at 5 and she wants you to stay for dinner. . . . Good-bye."

"What did you tell him that for?" asked Lily, when her mother had hung up the receiver. "If I'd wanted him to stay for dinner I'd have told you so, wouldn't I?" She was scowling now, like a beautiful cross baby.

Mrs. Lexington shrugged her shoulders. "You're going to eat dinner with him all the rest of your life," she pointed out, sensibly. "You're engaged to him and you're going to marry him the first of June, so you told me last night. . . . You care for him, don't you?"

Lily groaned. "Yes, but that's no

WASHBURN WILL RUN 'SWEET' CAMPAIGN

What he characterized as a "sweet" campaign, will be conducted by President Robert M. Washburn of the Roosevelt Club for the Republican nomination for United States Senate.

"I shall not mention the name of either of my two opponents nor will any one for me," he declared.

But in the same breath, he warns that he may revise this policy "if they descend" on him for his own protection.

The "sweet" policy, however, does not extend to any candidate that has the temerity to come into the field lacking the necessary qualifications for the high office aspired to.

"I may discuss him freely, but only that his own family may know him as he is," Washburn states.

The candidate will spend no money except for his own correspondence. Rentals, radios, advertising and "paid Hessians" will be taboo.

His attitude on any question—"safe or bristly"—he says, can be had for the asking and he stands on "as dry a platform as can be written."

WOMAN HIT BY TROLLEY CAR IN HUNTINGTON AVE.

Mrs. Lisa Winchester Sanford, 67, of East 84th st., New York, suffered a concussion of the brain and lacerations and abrasions today when struck by a trolley car in Huntington ave. THOUSANDS DELAYED ON B. & M.

Thousands of Boston-bound commuters were delayed in reaching their employment today when the driving truck of a locomotive on the Boston & Maine train from Rockport, due in Boston at 8:20 a. m., was derailed opposite Oak Island, Revere.

The Rockport train carried 250 passengers, but none were injured, as Engineer E. L. Whitney quickly stopped it after the derailed driving truck had bumped over the rails a short distance. The cause was undetermined an hour after the incident.

Many following trains were delayed and some were shifted to other branches of the road. The delays ranged from ten to thirty minutes.

2 DROWNED IN VERMONT; LAKE DRAGGED FOR BODY

Richford, Vt., July 2 (AP)—The Missisquoi river was being dragged here today for the body of Ernest Lagrow, 25.

West St. Johnsbury, Vt., July 2 (AP)—Word was received today of the drowning in Lake Neal, near Lunenburg, of Miss Eleanor Burke, 24, of that place.

7198 Killed By Autos in 77 Cities During Year Ending June 16

Washington, July 2 (INS)—Deaths from automobile accidents continue to increase, the Commerce Department announced today.

For the year ending June 16, 7,198 were killed in 77 representative cities, as compared with 6897 in the corresponding period of 1927-27.

In the month ending June 16, 498 were killed in automobile accidents in the same cities, a decrease of eight from the year before. The death rate increased 3 per cent in the last year.

WORK VISITS COOLIDGE, TO QUIT CABINET POST

Superior, Wis., July 2 (AP)—Secretary Work of the Interior Department arrived today for a brief consultation with President Coolidge. "I have my resignation from the Cabinet in my pocket," said Dr. Work, who recently was named chairman of the National Republican Committee. He intimated that this would be delivered to Mr. Coolidge today as he might leave again this evening to return to Washington.

FINDS THREE SINS ARE STILL UNPARDONABLE

Following is the eleventh installment of Winifred Black's series, "My Country 'Tis of Thee."

By WINIFRED BLACK

(Copyright, 1928, by Examiner Printing Company. Distributed by King Features Syndicate.)

Northampton, July 2—"Gosh, all hemlock," said the landlord, "I wish I was tired, I'd like to BE tired once in awhile."

And there he stood, looking exactly like Henry Clay Barnaby, late sheriff of Nottingham, with the Boston Ideal Opera Company.

I couldn't believe my ears—but Flaming Youth heard it, too—I knew that by the nudge he gave me.

I breathed a deep sigh.

"There really are a few real Yankees left," I said to myself.

And it really was a relief. On the way down from New York we stopped at a big old-fashioned New England manor house—painted white with green blinds, and set in a green lot without a blade of grass out of order.

"Codfish in cream, new potatoes, chipped beef, doughnuts and butter milk for mine," said I to Finnegan.

"Too-too!," said Finnegan to me.

But when we went up the old-fashioned steps into the old-fashioned parlor we were met by the Italian proprietor, bowed to our table by some sort of Hungarian and waited on by a requisition French waiter, accent, satirical smile, shoulder shrug and all. He was so very, very scornful that we had to order broiled lobster just to show him we knew what was what.

It took us some miles to get over the blow.

Further and further into the heart of old New England we hurried. The landscape was like a picture; great white houses deeply shuttered in green and shaded by magnificent elms, slipped by like some dream of an early American post.

Clean, cool, green, orderly, beautiful New England.

Every stick in every woodpile in perfect order and every once in a while a pair of great sea shells on the doorstep of some dignified mansion set in its aloof order and distinction like a picture in a perfect frame and by that sign and token

SMILING STAR OF SPEEDWAYS

FLASHING TO FRONT IN AUTO RACE RANKS

Babe Stapp, one of the premier drivers in the country, is entered and ready at Rockingham. He's out for the big money this time. And some points in the year's standing. Babe gives the fans many a thrill.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Aside from the Independence Day club events, there are only two tournaments on the schedule for this week.

The N. E. G. A. is holding a straight professional tourney at the Arlmont Golf Club today, and the Marshfield Country Club makes its debut as host to the open handicap medal play field on Friday and Saturday.

Johnnie Merwin, who will be a real threat in the coming state junior championships, was in rare form at the Rhode Island Country Club, when he turned in a 77 to win the annual Nayatt invitation.

Until Merwin put in an appearance, Ted Hancock, the Rhode Island State champion and one of the greatest left-handers in the country, had won first gross in every tournament in Little Rhody this season.

Chick Grasse of Mt. Pleasant got hold of one of his best smashes off the second tee to win the long driving contest at Marlborough. Chick hoisted one out 260 yards, which was out in front of Carl Nettelbladt's by 15 yards.

Johnny Roberts may have discovered the secret to success in a championship event. He booked passage for Europe for last Saturday and then went through to the finals of the intercollegiates at Rye. Roberts had little idea that he was destined to reach the final round and possibly with his trip abroad in mind; he did not undergo the mental strain which always accompanies a championship.

Maurice McCarthy's victory in the Intercollegiates was well deserved and one of the most popular in years. McCarthy's father is professional at the old Flatbush club in Brooklyn and Maurie is headed for higher honors than the national intercollegiate title.

At last a definite date has been set for the much heralded exhibition between Walter Hagen, the British open champion, and Archie Compston, the long winning Briton, who has an 18 up victory over the Haig to his credit. Hagen and Compston will meet in the first rounds of their 72-hole match at the Sandy Burr Country Club on July 24.

Bill Blaney, who captained the Williams golf team, has returned home and he is playing the best golf of his career, he will be bothsome at Essex. Blaney emptied at Rye for the Intercollegiate but was off form in the first round and went out.

TIME TRIALS AT AUTO TRACK TODAY

The speed demons at the Rockingham Speedway were balked in their first attempt to qualify for the annual 200-mile motor race at the Salem, N. H., track on the holiday.

Showers Sunday afternoon caused the trials to be put over another day.

Eight drivers are scheduled to make the attempt today and the balance tomorrow, starting at 1 p. m. Race ticket holders only will be admitted to the trials.

Dave Evans, Babe Stapp, Ray Keech and Lou Moore had their machines on the track awaiting word from Starter Jack Kerrison to do a few laps under the clock when J. Fluvius put an end to the day's proceedings.

What was in store for the crowd of 5000 which swarmed into the track was had when Keech and Evans reeled off several laps at 130 miles an hour and Stapp and Moore were very close to those figures while warming up their machine for the clocking test.

The enthusiasm of the railbirds for Keech was evident from the start. He has become a great favorite with the fans who have seen him work during the past few days and many regard him as a good choice for top honors.

Every detail has been perfected for the big July 4 event. Advance indications point to the largest crowd on record. The amplifiers have been installed and tested and the timing device will receive its tests tomorrow.

A comprehensive extra train schedula has been planned by the Boston & Maine railroad and for those who do not care to drive in the enormous crowd which is expected to attend, every effort is being made to make the journey as comfortable and as quick as possible.

Trains will arrive at the track in ample time to see the preliminary warming up and will leave immediately after the race is concluded. It is estimated that it will be over by 4:30 p. m. and the trip home made during the daylight hours and in ample time to participate in Fourth of July night festivities at home.

Twin-Pace Race at Revere Saturday

The entire card scheduled to be held last Saturday night at the Revere Cycle Track will go over to this week-end, Manager Nat Butler announced yesterday. Last week's race was the fifth in seven weeks that has been postponed since the bike season opened at Revere this year.

In the feature race Frankie Keenan, Revere pace follower, meets George Chapman, of Newark, six times American champion, in a match pace race. The two will race three heats of 10 miles each.

For a semi-final five-pace followers are listed to battle in a 20-mile handicap contest. They will be Henri Wyndaw, Belgium; Larry Gaffney, New York, and Dan Piccione, Providence, all of whom will start from scratch, and Frank Webb, Everett, who has a three-lap handicap, and Leo Maggoli, East Boston, who will have two.

Tilden Scores Win Over Jean Borotra

Wimbledon, England, July 2 (AP)—William T. Tilden, American tennis ace, advanced to the semi-final round of the Wimbledon championship tournament today by defeating Jean Borotra, one of the French "Three Musketeers," by scores of 8—6, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Tilden's victory carried him past the first of the formidable Frenchmen whom he must defeat to win the crown now held by Henri Cochet of France.

Tilden remains as the sole American contender for the championship as John Hennessey of Indianapolis was eliminated by Cochet in an earlier match, 6—4, 6—1, 5—7, 6—3. Rene Lacoste also had won his way into the semifinal bracket, defeating Baron H. L. de Morpurgo of Italy, 6—2, 6—3, 6—4.

BITTER FIGHT.

Borotra did not go down without a struggle, forcing Tilden to 14 games to win the first set and taking the second with comparative ease. Tilden settled down and swept the last two sets at top speed.

Twelve thousand fans packed the stands around the center court as Tilden and Borotra began their match which promised a tennis "notural." The bounding Frenchman got away to a fast start, taking the first game from Tilden. It was a deuced session of flashing shots.

TILDEN WINS SECOND GAME

Tilden, serving, won the second game, although Borotra brought it to deuce first. Slashing out with his famous cannonball service the American took the deciding point of the game with a sizzling ace.

The colorful Lovtra in his black beret was on his toes every instant, bounding like a panther after Tilden's fierce drives.

Games followed service until they stood at 3—2 with Borotra leading. He then broke through the American's delivery to lead by four games to two.

Borotra tried to give Tilden a point on a ball apparently called incorrectly by a linesman, but Tilden would not take it. Borotra then banged two of Tilden's services into the stands.

Borotra's double fault helped Tilden to take the seventh game and the American leveled the count in games at four all in the next, serving, driving and chopping superbly.

The agile Frenchman took his service, then Tilden brought the set to deuce at five-all, winning a deuce game with the aid of a stinging service ace, which caused the crowds to gasp. Borotra won the vantage game and Tilden, serving, went to six-all.

BOROTRA DOUBLE FAULTS.

For the first time Tilden took the lead when in the 13th game Borotra service. Taking his own, he then double-faulted on the final point. Tilden then swept the 14th game at love to capture the set, 8—6.

Borotra started the third set strongly, winning Tilden's service. Taking the next game with a spectacular shot almost at his feet, he stretched the lead to two-love.

After games had been even at two-all in the third set, Tilden went to 4—2 on a break through Borotra's service and then to 5—2, after which the American gave his opponent a game to compensate for what he considered a linesman's error.

That had enabled him to take the seventh game from Borotra. In a hot volley Fuel Tilden took the ninth game and the set, 6—3.

A feature of the play was the unwillingness of both players to accept linesmen's decisions on close points.

Tilden braced and allowed the Frenchman only one point in the next game, adding the fourth game also to tie the count at two games all.

Tilden, after the rest period, opened the fourth set confidently and displayed all of his stroking ifreworks in racing to a lead of 4—0 on games. He had Borotra on the run and once broke through the Frenchman's service at love, so severe were his returns. Borotra braced up to split the next four games, but Tilden kept the upper hand and ran out the set, 6—2, to settle the match.

Henri Cochet, the sharp-shooting French musketeer, advanced to the semi-finals today in defense of the Wimbledon men's singles by squaring the sturdy young American tennis star, John Hennessey, in four sets, 6—4, 6—1, 5—7, 6—3.

Cochet won the first two games, breaking through service at love in the second, but Hennessey retaliated by winning the third.

Hennessey gained a 2-1 lead in the fourth set, and also held the upper hand at 3-2, but he was unable to keep up the pace. The Frenchman's withering fire, under fine control, penetrated the American's defense as Hennessey swept through the last four games to take the set, 6-4 and clinch the match.

Rene Lacoste, French star, defeated Baron H. L. De Morpurgo, ace of the Italian Davis Cup team, in straight sets, 6-2, 6-3, 6-4, to enter the semi-final round.

In the mixed doubles, the American team of George Lott and Miss Molla Mallory won from the English combination, Donald Greig and Elsie Goldsack, 6—2, 6—4.

Miss Elisabeth Ryan, California veteran, chop-stroked her way to victory over Mme. Nicolopoulo of France, 6—1, 4—6, 6—2, to enter the semi-finals.

Daphne Akhurst, the Australian woman's champion, who eliminated the American, Miss Helen Jacobs, a few days ago, won her way to the semi-finals by defeating the chief British hope, Miss Kitty Bennett, in three sets, 2—6, 6—2, 6—2.

Senorita Lilla de Alvarez of Spain, the 1927 runner-up, put out the young German star, Cecelie Ausneg, 6—3, 6—4.

The American doubles team of George Lott and John Hennessey defeated the Englishmen, Lowe and Sherwell, in straight sets, 6—2, 6—2.

The fourth place in the semi-final was filled by Christian Boussus, young Frenchman, when he defeated his countryman, Jacques Brugnon, in something of an upset, 12—10, 10—8, 6—2.

Francis T. Hunter paired with Helen Wills to defeat J. C. Gregory and Miss E. H. Harvey of England, 6—4, 10—8.

GAELIC GAMES JULY 4

Tech Field, Brookline, will attract lovers of Irish football and hurling on July 4 for the Gaelic Athletic Association has an excellent program scheduled for their annual field day.

The main event of the day's festivities will be the football contest between the Galway team, winner of last years championship and a selected aggregation from Worcester. This contest will start at 5:30, and promises to be a fast and interesting till.

Galway is perhaps the best known team in this part of the country. It was hoped that the New York team would provide opposition for Galway, but it was impossible to get them here, and Worcester was selected to play.

A football game between the Lynn team and Division 26, which starts at 12:30 will set off the fireworks. The game should be a good one for the Sparks finished at the top of their league in 1927.

The next event will be staged at 1:45, with the Wolf Tones of South Boston competing in Erin's Own in a hurling game.

At 3 p. m. the Geraldines of Brookline will clash with the Shamrocks in a football contest that has all the earmarks of being a thrill. Following this match will be another hurling event with the contestants being Galway and Clare.

CLAUDE BRACEY HAS BEST SPRINTING MARKS

Talk about 15-year-old Frank Wykoff, California high school boy who won the century of the century from Charley Paddock. He is good, but there is a youngster a year or two older than he, Claude Bracey of Rice Institute, who will be running in the Cambus at the stadium this week-end who, on his record this spring, is the outstanding sprinter in the land.

He is credited with a 9 5-16 century and won both the 100 and 220-yard sprints at the national collegiate meet in Chicago. In the 100 that day he did 9 3-5 and in the furiens 20 9-10.

Round the Links With BOBBY JONES

THIS business of playing in open championships appears to be harder work for all of us every year. Before the actual commencement of hostilities, it was impossible to say who would find the course most to his liking. I feel perfectly safe in saying now, however, that no one found it easier.

The scores support this theory. In view of the fact that this course, Olympia Fields, and Oakmont, where the event was played last year, are the most difficult tests yet used for the "Open." It may be interesting, to make a sort of comparison of the two.

After conclusion of the tournament discussing the relative difficulty of the two courses, reached a rather general agreement that Oakmont is possibly one stroke per round the harder of the two. Most professionals have uncanny judgment in comparing courses.

It appears to be that the two tests are very little apart in the matter of obstacles requiring quite different styles of play. Oakmont was essentially a "second-shot" course. By that I mean, aside from the putting on the keen greens, the most exacting shots were the iron seconds up to the greens. The driving was important only to the extent that it reduced the distance to be covered by the second.

OLYMPIA FIELDS, on the other hand, offered its severest problems from the tee. The fairways are amazingly narrow, and nearly all gross bunkers required enormous length to clear them safely. Much of the trouble encountered came as a result of a tee shot which would have been all right on other courses, but not quite good enough for Olympia Field.

The very long hitter had to a great advantage, for bunkers encroaching upon the sides of the fairway reduced the playing area considerably for the lesser man.

The second shots at Chicago were on the whole a good deal simpler than at Oakmont and the bunkers were quite free from those diabolical pitches which were found at Pittsburgh.

It was that respect Olympia Fields lows was easier, but I think the difference was at last made up by the narrow tee-shots. The greens this year were equally difficult.

The scoring was slightly lower, taking the general average, than it was last year, mainly for the reason that there were more good drivers among the contestants than good iron players. The rounds put a premium on the player who could hit them far and straight off the tee, as the results showed.

McGinnis Strong in Detroit Tryouts

Detroit, July 2—Charles E. McGinnis, former University of Wisconsin track star, made a strong bid for Olympic fame when he won two events in the concluding program of the mid-West sectional Olympic trials.

The events were the pole vault and the high jump.

The big performance in the field events was a victory of Herbert Schwarze, in the shotput. Schwarze heaved the 16pound ball a distance of 49 feet 8½ inches.

Finnegan and Fuller in Title Ring Bout Tonigh

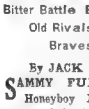
HONEYBOY IS SLIGHT CHOICE

Bitter Battle Expected Wi Old Rivals Clash at Braves Field

By JACK CONWAY

SAMMY FULLER aga Honeyboy Finnegan in ten-round bout for the N England junior lightweig championship at Braves Fie tonight is expected to furni thrills for the 20,000 fans w will witness the Argonne A. feature.

The tussle brings together t bitter ring rivals. For two yea Fuller and Finnegan have be ... sparring ch ... knock at ... other. The ... were final ... matched for ... night after ... Argonne Cl ... agreed to ... each battler ... per cent of t ... gate receipts. The weig ... for the conte ... 130 pounds at ... o'clock, shou ... find both Full ... and Finnegan ... their best.



Jack Conway

Finnega ... rules a slight favorite in th ... betting on ac... count of his superior reach and boxing ability.

The Fuller backers are relyin ... upon Sammy's crushing knockou punch to turn the tide of battle in his favor.

Fuller comes from Italian stock while Finnegan is Irish through and through. This combination usually makes a great fighter, but it has never failed to draw a record crowd.

FULLER came in from Sharon ... Gardens at noon today. He has been entrenched there for a week, putting the final touches to his training. He was accompanied by Manager Rip Valenti and Trainer Harry Keller.

Sammy looked liked a fighter held back by an invisible leash. The days he spent in the country have made him as strong as a lion. For his recent bouts in the featherweight division, Sammy has undrawn 126 pounds. He was obliged to starve himself during the latter stages of his training to get down to this poundage.

Fuller has been between 128 and 129 pounds while cooking into shape for Finnegan. The extra weight should tend to increase his punching power and also to make him more sure-footed than it was when he was battling as a featherweight.

The sturdy Irish lad never did not make any secret of the fact he intended to get a quick start a knockout from the sound of the gong in the first round. He does not believe Finnegan's fresh to stand up under the terrific bombardment of punches he intends to let loose.

ACCOMPANIED by Big Dan Carroll and Jerry Gardner, the colorful Finnegan motored to town today from Martin Flaherty's camp at Wameslt.

Honeyboy realizes that his clash with Fuller is a crucial engagement for him. He says he is at his best and that he will furnish the best ring exhibition of his career.

Honeyboy is a fine boxer and a brilliant ring general. As he is also able to punch and fight at close quarters, he will give Fuller as good as he sends in the fistic line.

FINNEGAN and Fuller each have a large following. This will result in some real hot rooting once the rival battlers start tossing hefty punches around.

The feature bout has a strong supporting card. Joe Minerva of the South End and Frankie Moore of Medford will collide in the semi-final of eight rounds. Three 4-a rounders and two four-rounders will complete the bill.

Twi Managers Ban Players Who Jump

The Tillight League managers have put a ban on the Twi players who have jumped to the Cape League. At a recent meeting it was voted that any of these players who were not in Twi uniforms when the second half of the race was started or if any players jumped during the second half they would be suspended from the league.

The Twi owners feel that the players have been treated fair and that in jumping at this time, inasmuch as the managers experienced severe financial hardships, it is unfair to the non games to keep the teams going

SCHOLZ TO RUN IN OLYMPIC TRYOUTS

The only American winner of a flat race in the 1924 Olympics at Paris was Jackson V. Scholz, and he will wear the colors of the New York A. C. in the final tryouts at the Harvard Stadium next Friday and Saturday.

A noted fiction writer, Scholz has been unusually durable as an athlete, yet this 31-year-old sprinting star is conceded to have an excellent chance to represent Uncle Sam at Holland.

Asked how he liked the arrangement which calls for the conclusion of the 100-meter competition next Friday, with the 200-meter trial, semifinals and final held over until next Saturday on the Harvard track, Scholz replied:

"The arrangement is decidedly to the advantage of the athletes, allowing a man who wishes to compete in both events a full night's rest between. The spectators who wish to see the finals in both sprint events might not look upon the change with so much approval, but the performers, I am sure, will be grateful."

GERMANY IS STRONG

So far as America's chances in the Olympic sprints at Amsterdam are concerned, Scholz says: "We will probably split honors with Germany. I competed against their best last year and know them to be formidable. We make a big mistake if we underestimate them.

"You ask me to size up the American prospects. Comparative times place Wykoff, Bracey and Simpson at the top in the 100-meter event, with Hussey, Russell and Cummings still be very much in the running. In the 200 meters these same men, with the possible exception of Hussey, seem likely to figure, but I think that another runner, Roland Locke, has a good chance to win it." It will be observed from the following comment that Scholz has not included himself in the field of competitors for places, but those who recall the terrific spurts which aided him to shine in 1920 and '24 know that he will be well to be a forefront.

SCHOLZ STRONG IN 200

Scholz says that 200 meters is his favorite distance, which is not surprising when one recalls that he won his talent at Paris in 21 flat, qualifying the Olympic record for the event which had been set in 1904 by Archie Hahn, another Irishman.

Scholz, who was 31 years of age last March 15, was born in Buchanan, Mich., and was graduated from the University of Missouri in 1920. His best marks include: 100 yards, 9.5 (disallowed because of following wind); 100 meters, 10.5s., Eastern trials, 200 meters, 20.9, final tryouts 1920; 220 yards, 20 4-5s., San Francisco (disallowed).

Few American athletes have had more colorful career than Jackson Scholz. He has toured the world as a competitor, and the most interesting incident that he recalls during his travels occurred in England. He says:

"I competed once in a small country meet in England on the estate of a Sir Somebody-or-other. Cyril Coaffee, Canada, was the other guest of honor. The 100 yard dash, run down a steep grade, was won in 9 2-5s., and promptly at four o'clock time was called out for tea, regardless of the fact that we still had a 220 to run.

"Despite our protests we were led to the cool, delightful garden of the estate, where among the distinguished, titled guests and beautifully gowned ladies we made a desperate attempt to appear at ease. I have often wondered how well we succeeded, and what an impression we must have made with our grimy hands, sweat streaked faces and filthy practice suits. Balancing a cup of tea under such circumstances has its drawbacks.

"Athletes these days must be versatile."

MR. BOSTON By Jack Conway

"WHAT do you think of Sonnenberg now?"

Mr. Boston put the question to Billy Sandow as the latter prepared to leave for Worcester to second Strangler Lewis in his world's title bout with Stanley Stasiak at the Fair Grounds tonight.

"I have always figured Sonnenberg a dangerous wrestler," answered Sandow. "I first saw him in a semifinal bout the night Lewis beat McLeod at the Arena for the second time.

"I went after a Lewis-Sonnenberg match hard. I figured it would be best to get off the Dartmouth man before he got too much experience. I couldn't see how a youngster with less than a year's wrestling experience could hope to lick Lewis."

"WHAT were your sensations as Sonnenberg roughed Lewis around the ring and scored the first fall?" pressed Mr. Boston.

"Awful," was the frank response. "I felt the old title was gone. I never saw such a cyclone in my life as Sonnenberg proved against Lewis.

"Lewis was criticized for stalling and getting under the ropes, but I believe he did the proper thing. The Dynamiter will wreck anybody who is so unwise as to stand up and test strength with him.

"Lewis was pretty well used up after the first fall. If Sonnenberg had not been an anxious to end things up quickly, he would have worn the champion down and he might have won. Lewis' strategy, though, tipped things the other way. I hope Sonny recovers from his injury as he is a fine young fellow personally. I would not care to have Lewis meet him if Gus had another year of wrestling experience."

LEWIS then drifted into the party.

"I've had Sonnenberg blues since Friday night," laughed the champion. "What do they feed them on up at Hanover to make 'em so wild? If Sonnenberg had clipped me with that last flying tackle of his which sent him hurling through the ropes, he would have ruined me and my entire family. I never before met a fellow who was so powerful."

BEFORE hitting the trail for Worcester, Sandow told Mr. Boston that he and Lewis were going to start for Europe next week for a 10 weeks trip. "The champ will meet two or three of the European stars," said Sandow, "and also show for three weeks in the music halls of Paris and London. We expect to make enough money to pay expenses. Meanwhile we shall have a holiday. Mrs. Sandow and Mrs. Lewis will accompany us on the trip. Lewis has been on the go since last September and is entitled to a vacation."

"I UNDERSTAND Stanley Stasiak and his wife are sailing for Poland next week," said Mr. Boston. "The Lion has not been home for 15 years and he wishes to visit his mother and father."

Here's an aside and as to remark that Stasiak might have to postpone his trip after he gets through with him tonight.

ON the way to the office, Mr. Boston bumped into Eddie Mack who is staging the Finnegan-Fuller bout at Braves Field tonight.

"It's the biggest thing yet," chirped Eddie. "Two natural rivals who can fight. The pair should be a box. It looks like Mahoney and Lantier over there.

Over-cooked meat or under-cooked potatoes are not any more easily digested than soggy or tough pie crust.

Eggs for desserts cannot be too fresh.

Stale eggs deteriorate with both flavor and whipping quality. The purpose of eggs in dessert is to add richness and flavor to form a struc- ture which will hold air which will make the mixture light and airy Anything other than strictly fresh eggs will not accomplish these pur- poses.

Not the least important part of the preparation of dessert is the serving. Hot desserts should be served really hot and cold desserts ice cold. Never place a chilled dessert on a warm plate or a warm pudding on a chilled dish.

Remember, that by the time the dessert is served, the appetite has lost its keenest edge and must be established by the attractive ap- pearance of the dish. A plain corn starch or chocolate pudding or cus- tard may be made very attractive uninteresting in itself, but molded into a fancy shape and decorated with whipped cream it becomes a thing of beauty with a strong ap- peal to the appetite.

A common garden variety of custard may be decorated with a sprinkling of grated orange rind or a floating island or two of beaten egg whites and sugar. Custards baked in individual molds are far more attractive than the same baked in a big pan and spooned out.

Here are some dessert recipes as suitable for the young folks as for their elders:

Lemon Pudding—2 lemons, 1 cup sugar, 1 cup boiling water, 2 egg yolks, ½ cup milk, 1 cup sugar, 2 tbsps. butter, 1½ cups flour, 2 tsps. baking powder.

Peel the lemon, slice very thin, re- moving seeds. Put in pan, add sugar and water and cook slowly until a thin syrup is formed.

Beat egg yolks, add sugar and melted butter. Add sifted baking powder and flour alternately with milk. Pour lemon syrup into a bak- ing dish. Pour over batter but do not stir. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees F., for ¼ hour.

When done spread meringue over top and brown at 300 degrees F. Make meringue by beating the three egg whites lightly and adding six tablespoons of sugar.

Chocolate Ice-box Pudding—½ c. butter, ½ c. powdered sugar, 3 egg yolks, 1 square chocolate, ½ tsp. va- nilla, 3 egg whites, ¼ tsp. salt.

Cream butter with sugar until very light. Blend in egg yolks one at a time. Add melted chocolate and fold in egg whites. Line a mold with lady fingers, fill center with mix- ture. Allow to stand in ice box 12 hours. Pile whipped cream lightly over surface before serving.

The mixture may be arranged in alternate layers with lady fingers or sliced sponge cake if preferred.

Butterscotch Rice Pudding—1-3 c. rice, 2 c. milk, ¾ tsp. salt, 1 c. brown sugar, 1 tbsp. granulated gela- tin, ½ c. cold water, 2 tsps. butter.

Soak gelatin in cold water ten minutes. Cook rice with milk in a double boiler until nearly done. Cook together in another pan 1 c. of the sugar and butter until sugar is melt- ed. Add this to the rice and milk and finish cooking. Add gelatin to cooked rice mixture and turn into a mold.

Grape Nut Pudding—2 c. milk, 4½ c. grape nuts, 1 egg, ¼ tsp. salt, ¼ tsp. vanilla, ¼ tbsp. butter, 4 tbsps. sugar.

Pour scalded milk on grape nuts. Cover and allow to stand in a warm place about ten minutes. Beat egg and sugar together. Stir into the cooled grape nut mixture. Add salt, vanilla and melted butter. Bake in a slow oven about 40 minutes. Serve warm with cream.

Irene Rich to Be Cast in Heroine Role in New Howard Film

En route Los Angeles, July 5—Every pound of rail and every way- side telegraph pole is bringing me nearer home. After the heat of that Houston convention, I think I am in a perfect position to under- stand the meaning of that old, old song, "Home, Sweet Home."

Irene Rich, whose message of au revoir when I left Hollywood was one of the last, sends me word she is to have a short vacation, and then she returns to the De Mille studios to play the heroine in "Ned McCobb's Daughter," by Sidney Howard. I say return, be- cause Miss Rich was rushed into the role of "Craig's Wife" at the time Anna Q Nilsson fell from her horse and injured her hip.

C. B. De Mille, at whose studios these plays are being produced, has caused it to be known he will choose the director for "Ned McCobb's Daughter" from the ranks. Every employe is waiting to see if the plum falls in his lap. The unknown, naturally, must be familiar with the films.

Robert Armstrong draws the male lead and Beulah Marie Dix is pre- paring the adaptation.

Drive to Halt Impure

DR. P. H. McLLOWNEY
Director Hearst Health Laboratory

A state-wide campaign has been instituted by State Fish In- spector Arthur L. Millett, assisted by Deputy William H. Sullivan, to put an end to the grave abuses con- nected with the sale of fish in wholesale and retail markets.

Since the first of March, 27 cases have been presented to the courts for prosecution, with allegations of having in possession or exposing for sale decomposed fish, or fish otherwise unfit for food, with a resultant total of fines amounting to more than $600.

Dr. McIlowney

Seizures of fish and shellfish totalling a huge aggregate have been made in the course of this in- tensive survey of the industry.

When we con- sider that there are 1800 fish markets in Massachusetts, it may readily be appreciated what a tremendous job was undertaken.

Prior to undertaking the survey, Chief Inspector Millett issued a sheet of instructions concerning the care of fish while being held for sale at the stores. Copies were furnished every fish dealer in the state.

MANY SEIZURES

It was in the nature of a pre- liminary educational campaign to give fish dealers an opportunity to remedy defects that had perhaps un- knowingly crept into their methods of handling.

Notwithstanding this action, Dep- uty Inspector Sullivan has just re- turned from an official trip to Gard- ner, Holyoke and Westfield, where he reports observance of many vio- lations. Seizures of unfit fish were made as follows:

At Gardner, 30 pounds of halibut and 40 pounds of mackerel were seized and condemned. In Holyoke at one fish market he found in the display case 95 pounds of haddock, 40 pounds of mackerel and seven pounds of salmon. In the cellar of the same store were found 300 pounds of haddock. At another fish market in Holyoke he found in the display case 40 pounds of halibut, 40 pounds of skinned dead lob- sters, 15 pounds of haddock, while in the cooler there were 40 pounds of halibut.

While inspecting a fish market in Westfield he seized and con- demned six pounds of cod, seven and one-half pounds of halibut and

For Good Complexion

By MARIA JERITZA

SLOWLY, month after month, year after year, "little cell on little cell," is the way an exquisite complexion is built up. It is very hard for many women to realize this fact. They want a beautiful skin at once—overnight—and cannot under- stand why the contents of some bot- tle or tube of cosmetic should not give the secret of beauty for which they are searching, provided the find the right brand.

With this vain hope women try one cosmetic after another—pow- ders, vanishing creams, astrin- gents, skin foods—without giving any of such much because of actual lack of suitability, as in response to a dazzling advertisement, or because some acquaintance found the prepa- ration satisfactory.

If your skin is a broken out hadly blotched, or, for that matter, if your scalp has an eruption—I do not sug- gest that you try the many cos- preparations and see advertised without first consulting a skin ex- pert.

Nearly every woman looks better with a little powder on her face when properly done, to remove the shiny look that results from too much moisture. The important thing is to choose the right powder, of a tint that matches your skin; apply it evenly, lightly, on absorbent cotton or a clean puff, and remove it every night with cold cream.

A medium skin, neither very light nor olive, calls for pow- der of "natu- rals" shade. This is the average American complexion.

A blonde with an olive skin needs powder in rachel tint. Flesh is a correct one for a youthful, pink and white complexion with the cream and white with a white satin and mousse, of course, white powder; but white skins are most unbecoming and white powder looks very dreadful dusted over a nose that calls for flesh or naturelle.

Strive for the natural look. Ex- amine your face carefully after powdering in the same light in which the powder will be worn. Select a powder light in texture if your skin is naturally thin. Heav- ier powders are for those whose skin is naturally heavy. Too heavy for your skin. Too heavy powder sinks in and chokes the pores.

For a powder foundation some women use an astringent or wit- hazel cream in addition. Other types of skin do not react well to astringent and vanishing cream. These require a mild liquid astrin- gent or even softened cold water as a powder base.

The best way to bend powder into the skin is by an invig- orating patting process, which can be bought in any drug store. Do not use lip or facial rouge unless you really feel them.

If you keep your health perfect above powder and rouge and night remove them every night with a cleansing, nourishing cream and wash your face every time with warm, then softened cold water, you can be sure should be and doubtless will be velvety soft and clear as a flower petal.

This Day in Our History

ONE of the most outstanding figures of modern history, Governor Woodrow Wilson, of New Jersey received the Democratic nomination for President on July 2, 1912, on the forty-sixth ballot by a vote of 990 to 96.

FACT Story of the German Submarines From Secret Records

CHAPTER SIX

IT was a fight against almost hopeless odds. The Navajo rode high out of the water and her towering hull and deckhouses were a splendid target for gunners of any skill. The submarine rode with her deck awash and only her conning tower was visible. The Navajo could bring only one gun to bear—a four-inch piece throwing a 13-pound shell.

The submarine has two 105-pounder six-inch guns, both laid on the target and far outranging the Navajo's weak armament. The Navajo had its sole advantage of speed. If she could steam out of range of the submarine's guns before she was hit, she might still escape, but the chances were poor.

A rolling swell was running, which spoiled the aim of the gunners on both ships. With her two guns, the submarine fired nearly two shots to the Navajo's one. But though the latter's after deck was deluged with water from the German shell-geysers, neither ship landed a shell on the other in 20 minutes of firing.

Suddenly a tearing crash on the Navajo registered the first hit. Exploding just before it struck, a German shell had gone home on the port counter near the rudder. The ship's side plates buckled under the blow and water streamed into her hold through the wrenched seams.

The submarine had fired 40 shots, the Navajo 25. The range which had begun at 1500 yards had widened to 6000 as the Navajo's engines fought for distance. The first German hit meant that they had the range. Would the next German shots find their mark in the engine room or the steering gear and end the fight?

The Navajo's after gun barked once more—its 26th shot. Quickly the breech-block was swung open and a fresh shell passed up by eager hands. There was still the hope of a hit.

A wild yell broke from the Navajo! The shell had landed on the submarine. Straight into the ammunition hoist it went and a great column of flame and smoke shot skyward from the German's deck as her magazine exploded. A heavy roar came over the sea to the strained ears on the Yankee merchantman.

The submarine sank low foremost under the wave. Her stern rose high in the air with her propellers thrashing for a last grip on the water and she slid to the bottom with her hatches open and her crew still on deck.

The last shot from the Navajo rang out and a final shell burst against the side of the doomed submarine just as it made its plunge into eternity.

Minutes Went By and Still No Sign From the Depths

But the victory was not yet won. While the battle with the first "sub" had been in progress the periscope of a second had cut through the water a thousand yards from its mate and now every soul aboard the Navajo was tensed for the second fight. Minutes went by and still no sign came from the depths.

The American ship pounded on with her engines driving her to the limit of speed. Minutes turned to an hour and gradually the strain passed. The second submarine had given up the chase.

The official report of Boa'n Ham is a model of naval brevity and conciseness. We reproduce it from the navy files at Washington:

"Account of attack of German submarine on the SS. Navajo in which the submarine was sunk by the steamship, as told by Z. Ham, chief boatswain's mate, commanding armed guard.

"The SS. Navajo while en route from New York to Havre sighted a submarine at 10:45 a. m. on July 6th. Previous to sighting this vessel, heavy gunfire was heard (9:30) one point on the starboard bow. The sea at this time was calm, but the weather was hazy. A short while afterward the Navajo ran out of the mist and sighted a submarine firing on a British topsail schooner about two miles away.

"The schooner was being sunk by the German's shells. On sighting the submarine, the Navajo changed her course to port, bringing the submarine abeam. The fog set down again and the submarine was lost sight of. After changing her course the Navajo continued towards Stark Point, England, for two hours and then changed back to her original course, heading for France.

"The position of the Navajo at the time of sighting the submarine was about 35 miles northwest of Cape La Hague, France.

"About 2.55 p. m. the same day the fog lifted and two shots were heard from a point 1500 yards distant. Upon observation a submarine was seen firing both guns at the Navajo. The first shot dropped 50 yards short on the starboard beam; the second one went over the ship. Two shots in alternation were then fired, heavy gunfire was heard (9:30) one point on the starboard bow. The sea at this time was calm, but the submarine was apparently making speed of 15 knots. Her bridge was about 300 feet over all.

"The Navajo proceeded directly to port to patch up the leak and to get Brisham, England, at daylight and make temporary repairs. A report by cable was made to the British Admiralty who gave orders to the vessel to proceed to Portsmouth. At Portsmouth a destroyer, No 84 convoyed the Navajo to France."

reason why I have to eat every meal with him from now on, is it?" she asked, and yawned again behind fingers that were like bits of carved ivory. "Jiminy! I've seen the man every day for weeks. I'm tired of looking at him—" She shut her fringed eyelids to show how tired she was.

"I'll have my coffee now, please," she said.

Her mother studied her for a full minute before she got up from her chair beside the bed. Then she shook her handsome head.

"Well, I give you up, Lily!" she decided then. "Here you are, engaged to marry a man who can give you everything worth while in life—and you're as indifferent about him as you are to her. Any other girl in Boston would give her eyeteeth to be wearing that ring on your finger this morning. I'm sure I don't understand you at all, though I would like me to ask him here for dinner." Still shaking her head, she went out of the room and down the stairs for the coffee tray.

Lily lay perfectly still, staring up at the ceiling.

She wasn't at all sure that she understood herself this morning. Last night she had been filled with triumph and happiness when she had walked into the house with Stuley Drummond's kiss on her mouth and his diamond upon her finger. For months and months she had been trying to get him to the "sticking point"—the point of proposal matrimonial to her.

"He'll never do it," her best friend, Susan Cain, had told her in their heart-to-heart talks. "Stuley's almost 11 and a banker as old as that is as slippery as a cake of wet soap."

But he had done it! Last night on the way home from Sue Cain's house he had asked her to marry him, and before she had had time to say "Yes" he had taken her in his arms and slipped the ring over her finger.

Looking back upon it now, it seemed to Lily that he had been too sure of her. Too sure that she would say "Yes" and fall into his arms. Too sure that she wanted him and all the things that he could give her.

"But am I sure of myself?" she thought, her eyes on the gray, slanting rain outside the windows. "I'm going to marry him right enough, but do I really love him the way I should?"

She wondered.

She liked him, of course. No one could help liking Stuley Drummond, with his quick, friendly smile, his nice eyes and pleasant face, his generosity and his good nature. He was just as attractive as a man could be, aside from the glow that his money gave him. And yet—

"What is it I want?" Lily asked herself. "There's nothing I can't give me."

Without realizing it, that was the way she always summed up people—from the viewpoint of what they had to offer her. What could this one give her? What could that one give her? And she liked or disliked them accordingly.

For instance: she liked Sue Cain better than any of the rest of her girl friends because Sue had the largest house and a car of her own. Because she gave more parties than anyone else, and because she knew more men. . . . A girl couldn't have a more useful friend than Sue Cain.

Then Lily loved her father and mother because they managed, somehow or other, to give her all the things that she wanted. She knew that they denied themselves in order to buy her beautiful clothes and matinee tickets and to keep her little imported handbag filled with money for luncheons downtown and for bridge debts and fresh white gardenias to wear on her shoulder. She loved them because they were her father and mother, too, . . . course. . . . just then that was unnatural.

The door opened and Mrs. Lexington came in with the tray of coffee and orange juice. She set it on one bedside table beside the gilt telephone and the gilt clock and silver hand mirror.

Then she settled herself down by the window with a mending basket filled with chiffon stockings and soft silk underthings. She always mended Lily's clothes with her own hands.

The Cyrus Lexingtons had no upstairs maid to keep the bedrooms in order and do the darning and patching. For Mrs. Lexington figured that she could do that herself without anyone being the wiser.

She was one of those women who can make one dollar do the work of two, just as she could make one servant do the work of two in her house. She was a hard-task mistress, but she was an excellent manager; and everyone thought that the Lexingtons had twice as much money as they really did, which was exactly what Mrs. Lexington wanted everyone to think.

If there was turkey on the table when people came for dinner, there would be corned-beef hash for the cook and the housemaid in the kitchen.

If she paid $100 for a dress, she wore cheap muslin princess slips under it. And if she always wore white kid gloves on her large, capable hands, they were the washable sort that last forever and do not cost much to begin with. She was all for "show."

For five years she had been telling her beautiful daughter that she wanted her to marry the man she loved when it came time for her to be married. "But," she had always added, "it's just as easy to fall in love with a rich man as it is to fall in love with a poor man. That's just common sense, Lily."

And now that Lily had done that very thing, she was much pleased. Her handsome blond face wore a satisfied look as she focused in her chair this morning and ran her needle in and out of Lily's gauzy silk stocking.

"I'm so glad we didn't sell the house last year when your father wanted to," she said comfortably. "I've always dreamed of you coming down the stairs in your white satin wedding dress and your veil. . . . We'll have the house decorated with lilies of the valley and smilax and orange juice, and a gleam of intense cream from her big gray eyes.

She could see herself, all in white, coming down the wide stairs next June.

"And Sue can wear yellow chiffon," she answered eagerly. "I'll run over to her house this morning and tell her I want her for my maid of honor. She'll drop dead when she finds out that Stuley did ask me to marry him after all. She was so sure that he was a confirmed bachelor!"

She jumped out of bed slipped into a wadded silk bathrobe, and went into the bathroom to turn on the water in the tub. About the room and rear of it, as it came pouring from the faucets, she heard her mother's voice telling her again how lucky she was to be engaged to a man like Stuley Drummond.

The only automobile that the Lexingtons owned was a large dark blue limousine.

Every morning Mrs Lexington drove her husband down to his office in it, and then drove herself so that she and Lily could use it if they wanted to, during the day.

It was in the garage on this windy March morning when Lily went downstairs. She stood in the windows of the sunroom for a minute as she buttoned her gloves. Then she shook her head.

She would walk over to Sue Cain's house on Commonwealth ave. she was tired and pale, and the wind would whip some genuine color into her pinched cheeks and put some life into her body, she told herself. There was no beautifier like a windy spring day.

"You're surely not going to walk out a day like this," her mother called to her from the head of the stairs as she opened the vestibule door.

Lily glanced at her and nodded. "Do me good," she said, shortly.

"But you'll ruin your clothes!"

"No, I won't—and what if I do?" The girl laughed. It was a careless sound, even if there was nothing light-hearted in it. "I'll never be able to wear out my clothes before I'm married. Mother, and after that." Her words were swallowed in the wind. The door closed behind her.

"And after that," she said to herself, starting down the wet side-walks on slender feet shod even in the thinnest of kid pumps, "I'll have everything I want."

Everything she wanted . . . and yet she felt that she was being cheated of something. There she was missing something that she ought to have! Something important, something worthwhile. What it was she didn't know, but she missed it, anyway.

And Lily hated to miss anything.

Sue Cain was not at home.

"She's gone down to town for lunch with the maid who opened the door of the house when the Lexingtons arrived, said.

So Lily swung around on the heels of her wet slippers and set off through the misty rain to the subway.

It was half past one when she reached the big downtown department store with the light shining in the show windows and the people crowding about the counters, putting down parcels, jostling each other in their hurry to get to shelter from the rain.

Lily went to the Touraine. "Why, I'm sure I was there," Lily told herself. She knew Sue's habits almost as well as she knew her own. They had been bosom friends ever since kindergarten days.

She stopped to look at some diamonds in a jeweler's window and came to inspect herself in the mirror that hung behind the counter. She never had looked better in her life. The wind and the rain had whipped the pallor right up against the roots of her little black hat, and had brought color to her cheeks and sparkle to her eyes.

"I am good looking," she thought, sitting for half a minute over her head. "There's no doubt of it."

As she turned away from the rain bespattered mirror she felt a tingle of excess upon her. Not more than six feet away, on the other side of the walk, a man stood looking intently at her.

She stopped dead still and stared at him. For a good half minute she saw nothing of him but the eyes in his head there. Blue eyes under straight, black brows—the bluest eyes she ever had seen.

Then she saw that he was young and broad shouldered and very nice to look at, in spite of his hard, impudent stare. He was leaning against a taxicab that was parked before the curb. His hands, with his hands in his khaki-colored pockets and a khaki-colored cap worn on the dark hair. There was a badge upon the lapel of his jacket.

The boy was looking down . . . leaped inwards, and went on her way down the sidewalk. After a few seconds she turned her head and looked back. He was watching her.

She stopped for an instant, her head down, thinking. Then slowly she swung around and went back to where he stood.

Seeking the Right Kind of Girl

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

JUDGING by the letters I receive, there are many earnest young men looking for the right kind of girl as sweetheart, wife and helpmate—one who will be content as the wife of a young man of moderate means and who will love working hard with him for their home and family. According to these young men, the kind of girl they are looking for is hard to find. And that is a great pity, because my correspondents also protest there are great numbers of good girls who are moping and waiting for just such a young man to bring them content and a busy, useful life through romance and marriage.

Why is it so hard for these charming, sincere, young men and women of character to find each other? Surely, Cupid must be "loafing on his job!"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

How can a man meet the kind of girls who write to you—girls who do not pick up men? It may be that there are many such girls, but I can't find them. I am 27 and at the present rate I will continue to be a bachelor.

"I'm tired of meeting girls at church and similar places, with the same result each time. If you don't try to kiss them, they are insulted.

"I really would like to meet a girl who had respect for herself and showed it. I'm no angel and I'm not narrow minded. I don't object if a girl wants to smoke—I provide my sister with cigarettes—or even take a cocktail occasionally within reasonable limits. I'd say if she didn't drink at all, that's hopeless nowadays.

I have a car less than a year old and earn more than $3000 a year selling a legitimate line. That isn't so bad, still I'm lonesome for the companionship of a real, clean girl, who will appreciate being respected and give a man credit for good intentions. Please can you suggest some way to your column.

"There are plenty of young men in the same fix I am, and getting more discouraged every day about ever finding a girl with ideals and principles. I wish I could meet personally some of the girls who write to your column. If that is against your rules, I beg your pardon for making the suggestion, but their letters are so sincere I am interested.

"R. G."

"A Regular Fellow" writes on the same theme, referring to a young woman who expressed high ideals in her letter.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Here's to the girl who recently wrote a letter to your column signed 'One Girl Who Doesn't Believe in Gate Receipts.'

More power to her! May she continue to stick to her theories. Some day a good girl regular man are looking for. She is a little in taken, though, in thinking all men are alike. Perhaps she is unfortunate in the kind of men or "sap" she knows.

"There is a man's side, also, to this question. Every normal, right-thinking man looks forward to the time when he shall meet the girl of his dreams and establish a home of his own. He is continually looking for the right kind of girl.

"Picture then, a young man of clean habits and morals, already fairly established on the road to success, willing and ambitious to meet this kind of girl. He goes to dances, at some churches or wherever he hears of respectable times take him, and what does he find? Drinking and petting—just a mad scramble for the dizzy pleasures of a flimsy age.

"If he refuses to indulge he is considered a prude. Do you think a man wants to share his name and take a chance on future happiness with a girl who indulges in these kinds of pleasures? True, she may stop all that kind of nonsense, but we are not looking for reformed girls.

"If it were possible, I would love to meet the girl who wrote that letter, if only to prove to her that all men are not looking for the drinking, petting and promiscuous petting type of girl, and also to prove to myself that there are girls such as she describes herself to be. I happen to be one of those who are still looking.

"Again, I say, stick by your guns, little girl. Sooner or later you are sure to meet some one who will appreciate you."

Why is it that these young men and women cannot find each other? Won't you write your theories and experiences? My answers right on this interesting question, which has so much to do with the happiness and successful mating of this and future generations?

Can it be that both young men and girls are afraid to be frank, clear-cut stand and so fail to understand each other? Would a little more moral courage on both sides clear up the situation?

I'm sorry I cannot bring about correspondence. My answers suggestion is: If in doubt, do the right thing. You will not regret being the highest. Look for these letters as soon as I am interested.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHEN you start out on a motor trip with a woman at the wheel, you know that you will GET there, provided her breath holds out.

* * *

But when you start out for a strange destination with a man at the wheel, it is all a delightful guessing game! If you wind up anywhere within forty miles of your objective, YOU win!

* * *

This is because a man would sooner die clutching his road-map than to ASK the WAY! For some deep, dark, unfathomable reason, a man would rather be gaught stealing sheep or cutting his own hair than to lower his morale by admitting that he is on the wrong road! It would break his spirit!

A woman seldom bothers to take a road map. She hasn't any time to study one, and anyhow she is too busy asking QUESTIONS! She can go farther, straighter and quicker on a powder puff and the strength of her own voice than a man can on seven road maps.

* * *

To a man, a policeman is something to "get past"; but to a woman, a policeman is just somebody to answer questions. She often stops and asks his "advice" about the roads, even when she knows them by heart. Why WASTE a perfectly good policeman?

* * *

But a man will go miles out of his way rather than DEMEAN himself by admitting that a blue hat and coat give any other man the authority to TELL him anything. When it comes to "advice," he believes firmly that it is better to give than to receive—and that's his guiding principle!

* * *

Many a woman has driven half a day beside a graven image with sealed lips and a famished look in his eyes as he swept haughtily past filling stations, drug stores, intelligent looking people and scores of traffic cops—only to discover that he was off the road!

* * *

YOU know how it is! He will! argue about it, park the car and try to "figure it out"; turn around, detour and retrace—but, never, never will he give it up and INQUIRE!

* * *

Only when a man is hopelessly lost and beaten, and the woman beside him is weeping for food, is he reduced to the state of exhaustion and humility where he is willing to expose his ignorance and admit that he is willing to take a stranger's advice.

* * *

But if you love him, never drive him to it! Never shatter a man's superiority complex by making him truckle to a traffic officer or admit that there is something that he doesn't KNOW!

STOCK MARKET LAMENT

"Tell me not in mournful numbers,"
Said the broker to the tape,
As it wiggled from the ticker,
There he stood with mouth agape.
"Holy socks, just look at Tin Plate,
Up 72 points and going more;
While Consolidate Sulphur's
Lower than the ocean's floor,
I'm as good as dead," he murmured.
Said a friend, "Buck up, old sport,
You are just one out of many
Who has sold the market short."
"Short, my eye," he answered quickly,
"That is not what's troubling me:
I bought Sulphur, while the wife said
'Plunge on Tin Plate heavily.'"

THE CHILD'S HOBBIES

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

"I CAN'T keep my boys and girls at home any more," is the prevailing wail of mothers of children who are pretty well grown up. The mothers conducting homes where the "gang" is always welcome, the mother who assists her young son to get material to make a "hobby-horse" to ride and be enjoyed by himself and his companions has little trouble with a family which only comes home to sleep. The secret is in making the home interesting, a place where new enthusiasms can be given a free rein along with parental assistance and whole-hearted attention.

Somewhere I read, long ago, a statement to the effect that what a man does with his spare time shows what kind of a man he is. It seems very logical too, for in our spare moments we do not do what the "boss" wants done; we do exactly what we like to do, as far as that is possible, thus indicating our ethical and mental status. The important thing, then, to do with our children is to give them interests which are normal and healthful and interesting for their spare time. Out-of-door activities are, of course, of first importance. Encourage them. But, in the problem of your children flitting from one place to another in search of amusement, and in your desire to keep them at home in intense interest and happiness, an excellent method is to encourage a hobby.

In an article on "Home Craft" by Blanche Halbert she states that much of our social unrest is due to the lack of opportunity for self-expression." Granting this to be true, the next step is to provide our children with means of expressing themselves. Find out what they like to do, and help them to do it.

Working with the hands develops a precision and skill, and gratifies this inmost longing to "do something." Every boy should have a good work bench and good tools, plenty of boards, and the friendly interest of his father to scent him along in the manufacture of wood things.

There are quantities of unpainted furniture being shown now. A few cans of paint and a brush with a few unfinished pieces such as a hook rack or a chair will start him on a painting hobby.

There are lots of chemistry materials which will fascinate some of your boys, while others may delight in learning the work of a taxidermist.

Girls have skipped back a few generations and are making rugs again, both on looms (which are easily procurable in the stores now) and the quaint and attractive braided rugs made of rags. Suggest that your daughter entirely re-make her room, painting floors and furniture, if possible, selecting new curtains, making a counterpane to harmonize with the new color scheme, and a few lampshades, the material for which can be purchased in the art departments of the stores. There is usually an instructor at those stores to direct customers as to the method of making shades, too.

Used typewriters can be obtained for a very small cost if your young person tires to be the great American novelist.

TO LIVE DECENTLY

By LUCY LOWELL

IN this column not so long ago I wrote of a conviction of mine, that what we human beings need in the way of religion is not a faith which tells us how to live in some vague future, but one which will provide us with more abundant life here and now.

A reader writes me from McLeansboro, Illinois, her views of this. They do not entirely correspond with my own, but that does not mean they are not as reasonable and helpful—perhaps more so, indeed! Therefore, I am printing for you, in part, the letter from Mrs. Jess Todd:

"Dear Lucy Lowell:

"The religion that teaches us only how to act in some future existence is no more stomach ache may die is not the religion of God. For He is the God of the living, not of the dead.

"It is the plan of the Infinite that we be like Him as nearly as we can, and in so far as is possible, establish heaven here on earth. One way to do this as I see it is for us to do to others those things we would have them do to us.

"You ask what more reasonable basis of religion there could be than kindness? A say love, for God is love.

"MELVADEAN TODD."

Of course love is the basis of all religion, all faith, truth, life. But kindness is the expression of love; without love there can be no kindness though kindness is but a part of the whole.

HATTON-BEERY COMBINE IN NEW ROLE

Just in the nick of time, Raymond Hatton and Wallace Beery changed their style of slapstick comedy for "Partners in Crime," the film of the week at the two Olympias and the Fenway. Even their most ardent admirers were beginning to weary a bit of Mr. Hatton kicking Mr. Beery and wife verse. The new photoplay boasts a plot, and gives the diminutive Mr. Hatton a chance to appear in a dual role.

Wallace Beery

As "Knife Reagan," lord of the underworld he has an opportunity to do more real acting than he has engaged in for months. As a newspaper reporter, he is as beloved to be his familiar comic self. The alternation in roles is good, and a like service might have been done for the bulky Mr. Beery.

The scene of the present production alternates between high pressure melodrama and hysterical comedy. Some of it is pretty clever done, though the titles still get in the way of the scenes and slow up the action. A few are funny; most of them are the usual exhibition of synthetic hilarity direct from Hollywood.

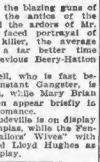
Still, between the blazing guns of the gangsters, the antics of the comic pair, and the ardors of Mr. Hatton's pretty leading portrayal of the champion killer, the average audience have a far better time than at the previous Beery-Hatton slapstick bouts.

William Powell, who at last accounts was Constance Talmadge's, is the only villain, while Mary Brian and Jack Luden appear briefly in an incidental romance.

The usual vaudeville is on display at the two Olympias, while the Fenway shows "Sailors' Wives" with Mary Astor and Lloyd Hughes as an added photoplay.

CHARLIE RAY IS HIT IN FAST COMEDY

A skillful combination of romance and action, depicted in a clever and interesting way, makes "The Count of Ten," the new picture at the Keith-Albee Boston, an unusually entertaining film.



While Charles Ray is cast in the lead, the rest of the cast, a collection of featured players, deserves equal credit for the success of the picture. The work of James Gleason as the prizefighter's manager and Arthur Lake as the lazy and Johnna Ralston trouble-making brother, are especially good.

"The Count of Ten" was adapted from Gerald Beaumont's sport story called "Betty's Ante," which recently appeared in the Red Book Magazine. The action takes place in Chicago and New York and brings in many of the sports familiar to persons of the boxing fraternity.

The picture has many exciting scenes. The romantic atmosphere is supplied by the pretty and diminutive Johnna Ralston, Harold Lloyd's former leading lady, and she is seen at her very best. Others whose work was excellent were Edythe Chapman and Charles Solomon.

Charlie Ray is excellent as the youthful and "dumb" prizefighter whose goal is the middleweight championship of the world.

POWER TRUST 'FED' SCHOOLS

Questioned as to how he arranged to get these pamphlets into the schools, Herwig declared he first sent cards to the teachers, with the pamphlet samples, and the suggestion that they be employed in instruction work.

"Our bureau does not originate speeches," Herwig said. "We sent our through the state speeches that have been made elsewhere by utilities officials, however."

UNEMPLIMENTED PROFESSOR

Herwig submitted a report he had prepared, showing the Wisconsin business men connected with the economic department of Wisconsin University through Herwig's connection with Prof. Glaser of the university.

The witness said when Glaser told him that he was writing a book on public utilities economics, he had complimented the professor, saying on the opportunities presented in such a publication. Herwig told Glaser, the testimony showed, that there were no good texts on this subject existant.

Herwig, however, denied he had offered to collaborate or co-operate in the writing of the book.

"When Glaser completed his book he sent me a copy," Herwig said. He showed it to W. R. McGovern, of the Wisconsin Telephone Company, who had knowledge as to the accuracy of Glaser's statistics."

Herwig declared McGovern had suggested certain changes in the book but Glaser did not make them. The witness said so far as he knew the public utilities contributed $11 not finance the publication of the book.

Information which formed the basis of a chapter on public utilities contained in a book written by Prof. Wey, of Wisconsin University, was furnished by the utilities bureau, according to Herwig.

NATIONAL ELECTRIC LIGHT ASSOCIATION
29 WEST 39TH STREET
NEW YORK

Omaha, Nebraska,
August 19, 1926.

Mr. Fred R. Jenkins, Chman,
Educational Committee, NELA,
73 West Adams Street,
Chicago, Illinois.

Dear Mr. Jenkins:

I have read with a great deal of interest your letter of July first, and also those of August 11th and 12th, to Mr. Aylesworth about the work of the Educational Committee, doing everything possible to right the unfortunate situation that now exists in having text books that are in the hands of pupils of the schools containing erroneous and unfair information about the economics of our business and particularly those pertaining to electric light and power companies, their financial matters, operations and policies.

I was very much surprised when I read Mr. Gilchrist's report on this condition. I think your idea is very good of having Dean McLaughlin of this matter. It is fortunate, too, that Mr. Mullaney will also help.

You have my very best wishes for a successful result in the very important work which you are undertaking.

Very truly yours,

J. E. Davidson

President

HERE J. E. Davidson, at the time president of the National Electric Light Association, approves the campaign of propagandists for the power interests to banish from school books what he calls "erroneous and unfair information about the economics of our business." He emphasizes "those pertaining to electric light and power companies, their financial taining to electric light and power companies, their financial matters, operations and policies." Dean Ralph E. Heilman, of Northwestern University, whose selection to "handle this matter" Davidson approves, has been an outstanding educational champion of the utilities for several years, and was paid fees by them for delivering addresses in Indiana, according to evidence in the record of the Federal Trade Commission's investigation of the so-called Power Trust. Heilman did not investigation of the so-called Power Trust. Heilman did not censor the books, according to the record, but Bernard J. Mullaney and Fred R. Jenkins did. They protested a textbook reference to Samuel Insull's $200,000 slush fund for one thing, and it was eliminated.

$2,500,000 in Balance

Today Determines Whether a Five-Year Quest for a Most Worthy Cause Succeeds or Fails

Today is one of the most important in the history of the International Young Men's Christian Association College at Springfield. Midnight will determine whether its five-year quest for a fund of $2,500,000 has succeeded or failed.

Those who wish to assist this worthy institution in expanding and endowing its work have but a few hours in which to act. A month ago, 85 per cent of the $2,500,000 fund had been raised. Half the balance is conditionally pledged on the raising of the other half during the current 24 hours.

The 600 students at Springfield are being trained to become leaders in many phases of Y. M. C. A. work, as well as in industrial concerns, boys' clubs, Boy Scouts, playground and recreational centers. The graduates go directly into the work of "building" men—developing the spirit, mind and body of future citizens of America.

A gift to this endowment fund is an investment in better citizenship. The Old Colony Trust Company is the New England depositary for the company. It will receive and acknowledge all checks. But they must be put in the mail TODAY.

The Prince Flies

And Britain Worries

THE PRINCE OF WALES, PARACHUTE ATTACHED, CLIMBS INTO HIS FLYING MACHINE

The Prince of Wales goes flying, sets a good example, and England worries. What would happen, it asks, if the plane crashed and the Prince were killed?

That would be sad, but the only result would be that the NEXT son of the King would become Prince of Wales and inherit the throne if he outlived his father.

Britain, a great organization, doesn't depend on INDIVIDUALS.

The king wears the crown. The Prime Minister does the thinking under a different hat. The man that will do the thinking when the present Prince of Wales wears the crown probably is unknown now, as the boy David Lloyd George was unknown when Queen Victoria was wearing the crown and looking solemn.

The anxiety about the Prince of Wales and his flying reproduces the anxiety that was felt concerning his great-grandmother, Queen Victoria. She was born in the days of stage coaches and horses. Britain was amazed, filled with admiration and much worried at her "Reckless Heroism" when she started traveling by train.

They sent another engine ahead of her train and directors of the railroad rode on that engine that they might meet an accident if any were to come.

But the Queen DID sit behind a snorting locomotive, allowing it to drag her over the country, and Britain worried about that.

We smile at the anxiety caused by the Queen's railroad travel. The world will soon smile at the anxiety caused by the Prince's air flight.

Those now living will wonder how men dared to go on narrow railroad tracks, narrow earth roads, instead of traveling safely on the wide paths of the sky, 25,000 miles wide in all directions.

Meanwhile, the Prince of Wales sets a good example that might be followed by some of our prosperous young gentlemen who have nothing to do with their money. They should develop today's airplane, as young W. K. Vanderbilt, twenty-five years ago, developed the automobile, making it fashionable and improving it, racing at break-neck speed around Long Island roads.

Miracle Surgery

Treating Arthritis

By an operation, marvelous in its ingenuity and skill, Dr. Fred H. Albee, bone surgeon, has relieved William Ogden Heath, twenty-seven-years old, of the crippling effects of arthritis. The knee joints were rebuilt, and calcareous deposits removed from the thigh joints, restoring motion to them.

That remarkable operation is unfortunately not one upon which much hope can be built for the great majority of sufferers from arthritis.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 2—Diary of a modern Pepys: Breakfasted with a man who recently dined with Mr. Coolidge and told of his taciturn manner, which I believe his chiefest charm. Nor did the President speak a word during the evening save when directly addressed.

So coming upon Francis X. Bushman, chatted awhile, and his hair has grown white, albeit his figure is youthful. This day I hear celebrities who pose for cigarette ads are now donating the monetary rewards to a fund for unfortunate writers and artists.

In the evening to dinner with Councilman Meredith Nicholson, and we dropped into a vaudeville show, but found it dull, and walked among the bright lights of Broadway. Then home and read interesting proof that Poe's best creative efforts were during temperate years.

CIRCULATING libraries now make books easily available for busy workers. Agents present their lists to office building employes for selections, these are delivered and called for. As a result it is estimated some 100,000 books are read weekly that would not be otherwise.

SOME interesting reading statistics have been gathered by these agents. Bookkeepers and accountants almost invariably show a preference for detective stories. Office managers lean toward the biographical. Stenographers like romance and poetry, and the most consistent readers of all office workers are office boys. Most of us have noticed that when we make our calls.

MORE books are borrowed from circulating libraries in the financial district of skyscrapers than any other. Stories of finance are rarely selected.

A GRAMMATICAL purist has found 13 out of a selected 20 men of prominence invited to speak over the radio at different times in New York used "don't" when "doesn't" should have been used. Only two in any way approached the English and they were far from perfect.

AND two first night theatrical performances revealed such glaring grammatical absurdities they received critical hoots. Yet they settled down to long runs. As cheerleader in the non-grammatical movement, that's dandy.

THERE have been in all 87 "Broadway Butterfly" murders. These concern the beautiful small town girl who comes to the city to acquire fame and fortune but chooses the primrose path—and the old story. Champagne, jewels, a brown stone front and the usual mysterious death.

The first "Broadway Butterfly" murder victim was Helen Jewett. Her body was found in a house in Thomas st. in 1836. According to the press of the day, Thomas st. was then a thoroughfare of magnificent homes with gardens and "filled with rare champagne and pretty filles de joie."

She was compared to Phryne and Aspasia and the town was in an excited lather for weeks. In the chronology of such crimes there is evidence the victim always led several men to believe each was everything in her life.

Born gold-diggers, they make the men pay, pay and pay. And some time or other one discovers he has been plucked and in the heat of fury kills. The "butterfly" murder is the most difficult of all to solve because the men who would be suspected are usually philanderers of prominence who have carefully secreted their identity from those they meet in such intrigues.

MOST of us rural soandsos reveal our backwoodsiness in department store elevators. I noticed it today in calling out "Sixth floor" twice and receiving a withering look from the operator for each call. Department store elevators here stop at every floor.

Debunkers Busy

If Betsy Ross Didn't Make Our Flag, Who Did?

Librarian Putnam of the Library of Congress has joined the iconoclasts who are busy debunking history and intimates grave doubt that Mistress Betsy Ross of Philadelphia had anything to do with making the first flag of the nation because he has been unable to dig up any bill or voucher showing that money was paid to Mrs. Ross for working on the flag.

An unsatisfactory reason for demolishing a tradition. What if the pretty seamstress didn't put in a bill? In those days perhaps there were men and women who were willing to perform a service for their country without asking to be paid for it.

Perhaps Mrs. Ross didn't make the flag. Maybe the picture showing the stately Washington, the gallant Morris and the avuncular Ross conferring with the pretty little widow is a mere figment of imagination. Maybe the flag was sewed together by some regimental tailor who chewed tobacco.

Who cares? We must have national heroes, we must have romantic figures in our history. Betsy and her home have provided one of the most satisfactory of these. If she didn't make the flag, who did?

Speaking of Fishing

What gives a thrill in angling is a strike that shows snappiness of appetite and disposition.

Simply to hook and land a specimen of the piscatorial species which exhibits the characteristics of a waterlogged shingle is toil, not sport.

We hope, then, for Calvin's sake, that the carefully sorted and dieted trout in the fifteen pools at Cedar Island Lodge are not the only possible objectives of presidential adventure. For, if they are, he could get quite as much of a kick by visiting the New England coast and still-fishing for cod.

SUBTLE DIFFERENCE IS ALL-IMPORTANT

By DR. FRANK CRANE

ELINOR GLYN is responsible for the name "It." It is a term for personality. It is that individual something about a person or a thing that makes it attractive.

Did you ever ask what you know about a man? You could not tell the color of his eyes or hair, nor what kind of clothes he wears, but you would know him if you saw him turning the corner two blocks away. It is the indefinable "It" about him that you recognize.

If the odor of a rose were absent or the flavor of an apple, the difference in weight could not be detected by the most sensitive scales. Yet it is the flavor of the apple and the odor of the rose that give these two things characteristics.

A composite of the "success advice" given by successful men would be one long string of contradictions.

One advises you to keep out of debt; another to get in debt.

One says get married early; another not to burden yourself with a family until you are sure of your future.

One says to follow the plan of "taking others with you"; another to "steer your ship alone."

And so on, ad infinitum.

Such contradictory advice is given by "good men all," who have succeeded themselves and ought to know what they are talking about, and who honestly think they are imparting the reasons for their own personal success.

The moral is: It all depends.

The truth is: They don't know.

The reason it is so hard for one who has succeeded himself to tell others about the secret of that success lies in the importance of the unknown quality.

Just why John Barrymore is better than a dozen other actors, or why Pavlova stands out from the other finished dancers of the day, they themselves could not fully explain.

If they tried they would probably give rules which others have followed—perhaps more conscientiously—without arriving at the top rung.

The subtle, eluding difference is all-important.

It defies analysis. It is the X quantity of the problem.

But it often marks the difference between success and failure.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

WHAT is there in life for the penniless, unmarried, untrained woman over 40?

That is the most tragic question of our times.

Every day they come into my office, these women with a great fear in their eyes. Physically they are still young. Emotionally they are still eager to take their place in the big parade. But what can they do?

"Oh, I can do anything," they say with a desperate cheerfulness when one asks them. But in truth they can do nothing which has a market value. They can do "plain cooking"—sew a little—care for a child—tidy a room—sit with an invalid. But they can do none of these things sufficiently well to sell their services. They are charming, sincere, cultivated—but they are derelicts.

A terrible picture? Yes—and it wrings my heart as I draw it. But I wish I might make it even more terrible to serve as a warning to all untrained women.

Do not let your girl grow up without knowing how to earn her living.

Or, if you are already a married woman, do not let yourself become a year older without taking up some line of work which will enable you to support yourself if you are thrown on the world.

Life has never been as terrible as it is today for the untrained, hapless woman over 40.

Here is a letter from one of them. I have no answer to give her. Perhaps you have. If so, will you send it to me, giving any practical suggestion which may help women in her plight.

Dear Elsie:

The sad old story—woman past forty-five—unexpectedly and suddenly deprived of a life of plenty. No business experience. No training of any kind worth speaking of. Would be capable with proper training, I am sure, but what sort of training, is the question.

I have a very strong desire to do social welfare work, but a little investigation into this matter is not very encouraging. I am told that a year, at least, of university training is required and sundry other difficult requirements.

Elsie, do you think that you might have a suggestion to offer? What do you think of beauty culture in one's own home? Somehow that kind of work doesn't appeal to me, but there just must be something. If not, I shall find myself facing a serious situation. I am like a squirrel in a cage. My mind is whirling with confusion and the heartache of it all.

I should like an opening, no matter what, that would lead into something. Won't you give some of your valuable time to this subject, and from your great experience tell the woman past forty or forty-five what she can do to prepare herself for making a livelihood. What chance is there in Y. W. C. A. work or the Red Cross? Just what are the necessary attributes and training for such work? I enjoy splendid health and am told I have personality.

Thanking you for any help you can give me,

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.
